A Bull Runs up Against the Real Thing The Lindsay and Pontypool Railway in securing their right of way have had considerable opposition in some quarters. The neighborhood of Dunsford however has put up possibly the greatest opposition. Early last week, a gang of section men were approaching the disputed territory when they were attacked by the occupant and to save their lives were compelled to abandon a handear and state that the party to the dispute in this case was a fine big black bull, which had broken from its owners fields and was ready to tackle anything in sight. On Friday of last week, a freight train was making its way towards Bobcaygeon and when near Dunsford, was met by the bull, who with more than his usual vohemance disputed the train's right of way. When the engine gave forth a succession of short, sharp whistles two cars had been derailed and hadly tallion that there is no felacy in the real thing. The most remarkable incident about the whole affair is that cident about the whole affair is that
