LINDSAY CENTRAL EXHIBITION

The Central Fair a Record-Breaker in Point of Attendance and Exhibits.

12,000 PEOPLE ON THE GROUNDS FRIDAY

Every Department of the Fair Ahead of Last Year—Grand Showing in Horses, Cattle and Other Live Stock—Magnificent Display of Pottery—Exhibits in Main Building and About the Grounds—Exciting Speeding Events—Notes on the Fair.

and again. In providing these superior specialties the managers scored a popular hit, and the increased attendance directly attributable thereto should encourage them to do better next year.

Scattered about the green sward between the main building and the entrance gates were tents, pavilions and exhibits of various kinds, including farming machinery, gasoline engines, pumps, patent gates, carriages, wagons, cutters and sleighs, and the stands of vendors of jewelry and patent medicines, and up and down, through and across, surged a never-ending stream of people who seemed determined to get the worth of their money by critically inspecting every object on the grounds.

Thousands of hearts waxed glad early on Friday when it was seen that the weather was clear and warm, indicating an ideal day to follow. It was the signal for a great movement of the people of the surrounding district in the direction of Lindsay, and until noon all the roads leading from the townships disgorged an apparently endless procession of vehicles, filled with happy pleasure-seekers and expectant prize-winners. Where the late-comers securing accommodation we know not those living within easy driving distance and the crowds brought in by railway and stage, taxed the capacity of our hotels before 10 o'clock. Some sought the hospitalities of friends, while others appreciated their appetites sharpened by the long drive—with a modest lunch at the grocery stores and lunch counters and then hurried away to do some shopping before the program opened at the Fair grounds. At 11 o'clock the town presented a very gay appearance. Flags were flying everywhere, the streets were crowded with visitors and the leading stores were doing a thriving trade. At the Fair grounds the rush began soon after 10 o'clock, many having learned the lesson that it is desirable to do so before the great mob movement early in the afternoon. These showed ones dined on the grounds and found that the meal served by mine host every, less of the dining hall and refreshment booths, was well worth a quarter of any man's money.

Up till twelve o'clock Mr. D. Ray, ticket seller, and his assistant, Mr. Howard Stevens, had time to nod to old friends and perhaps make a comment or two regarding Fair prospects in general, but half-an-hour later all attempts at conversation were abandoned and they handing themselves to the task of directing pastboards to the waiting throng and making change with a celerity that excited the admiration of all beholders. P. Curtin and J. Short, at the main gate—whose chaffing would be missed by all—found it difficult at times to welcome old friends, so great was the rush through the portals guarded by them. It was 2 p.m. before the crush abated and it is estimated that fully 12,000 people passed through the several entrances.

(From Saturday's Daily.) Public opinion is at variance as to whether there were 10,000 or 12,000 people on the Central Fair grounds yesterday. There is no ground, however, which is that the attendance was the largest in the history of the Fair.

The speeding events were well contested, and these were good exciting bursts of speed on the home stretch. Between the heats the clever dancers, acrobats, jugglers, singers and comedy artists engaged by the management appeared in turn on the grand stand, and in every instance gave unbounded satisfaction, the performers being applauded again growth of business, which in a few years bids fair to make their industry one of the most important within our town's borders. At the north-west end of the building Mr. Herb Little, manager of the Hudd Harness Co., had a fine exhibit of horse furnishings, including single and double harness, collars, hames, bells, blankets, etc. Several fine sets of natural oak-tanned harness excited the special admiration of all horsemen. Mr. J. A. Williamson, whose fame as a maker of fine harness is not necessary to dwell upon, made an exhibit of several sets, the neat workmanship on which was highly commended by good judges. Some rugs and blankets added a touch of color as a background. Mr. W. A. Goodwin, of the Lindsay Art Store, made a superb display of framed pictures, mouldings and imported and domestic wall papers on the west side of the building. There were papers for the dining-room, parlor, library, hall, bedroom and bath room, at all prices, and whether cheap or dear the design was both pretty and attractive. The exhibit was a convincing evidence of the great range of papers offered by the Lindsay Art Store. Much taste was shown in the arrangement of the goods, and for this Mr. Will Goodwin, of the wall paper department of the R. Simpson Co., Toronto, deserves the credit. Near the south door Mr. J. Carter, Lindsay's one-price clothier and furnisher, made a very striking display of high-class clothing and furnishings, including hats, caps, underwear, etc. During the last few years the excellence of the clothing handled by Mr. Carter has become widely recognized, and his trade grew so large that he decided to give up dry goods. He has had no reason to regret his action—his clothing sells at a light. Mr. H. S. Iyer, of the Lindsay Grain and Lumber Co., exhibited several "deers" and sections in profusion, the finest work turned out. The deer would grace the Victoria County's new hospital. Mr. D. Cinnamon, stover and hardware merchant, made a good exhibit in his line. His coal and wood ranges attracted the attention of many housekeepers, and he booked a number of orders. Magnificent displays of flowering and foliage plants, palms, etc., were made by Messrs. E. Maxson, Thomas Connolly and Wm. Worsley, Mr. Maxson, being a professional florist. His display filled a large stand in the centre of the building, and made a beautiful sight. His showing of cut flowers was also choice, the Dahlias and cosmos being admittedly the finest ever seen in Lindsay. Mr. Connolly, who is a flower lover of many years' standing, and very successful in his career, had over 200 varieties in his collection, and over 50 varieties in the list and number of ladies sighed regretfully as they noted with envy the healthy appearance of some beloved plant which they never could succeed in raising. Mr. Worsley, confined his exhibit to begonias, and it is not flattery when we state that few professionals could show a finer lot of plants. Those of the tuberous variety were especially choice. In fruits the display was a striking one both as regards variety and quality. In apples especially the fine showing excited the surprise of all beholders, it being generally understood that the crop had been a partial failure in this district. Over 30 varieties were represented, and fruit was never seen at Toronto Industrial. It is pleasing to be able to state that for the first time our local growers have taken the honors from outside exhibitors. "Section No. 1, a collection of apples, Wm. Robson, Iowa, and Geo. Smith, Manilla, defeated Bowen, Newcastle, and Mr. Thos. Connolly captured 1st prize for Ontario apples, 2nd for collection of pears, and 1st for Flemish Beauty pears. Messrs. W. M. Robson and J. B. Knowlson, town, and Geo. Smith, Manilla, almost monopolized the grape class, and the fruit was certainly a credit to the district. Mr. Robson also deserves a word of praise for his superior collection of the index of small fruits; the size and fine appearance of some of the varieties evoked exclamations of surprise from every visitor. No better dessert pears were ever seen at any fair.
