A SPECIMEN CASE.

The United States Steel Trust, says the Hamilton Times, has been selling rails to foreigners at $18 a ton, at which price Mr. Schwab in his letter to Mr. Frick, said it had a net profit of $6 a ton, or 33 1-3 per cent. The price to the United States "protected" buyer has been $28 a ton. It has been enjoying a flush period, at one time having over a year's output ordered ahead. But it is now catching up on orders, and a period of contraction in railway building makes it probable that something will have to be done to push sales. Does the trust propose to drop some part of its excessive profits so as to give the "protected" people cheap rails and induce such a demand as shall enable it to keep its men employed? Not it. It proposes to keep up the figures, reduce its staff and probably out wages. The Trust doesn't care a fig for the United States workingman or for the United States consumer; it is after the last dollar that the tariff will is sending rails to Corea at $20 a ton trade. The New York Journal of

"But how is it to get this trade? Not at 828 a ton or anything like it. It is said to have already secured a contract for 5,000 tons to be sent to Corea at $20 a ton in Pittaburg. No doubt they can be supplied for Corea good profit over the actual cost of manufacture at that price. If necesmry they could be sold even lower. and the actual cost can be considerably reduced by a readjustment of the ore and pig-iron figures. But is this export trade to be built up at 320 a ton or lower, while American railroads continue to pay $28 and draw the means of doing so out of the industries and trade of the United States? It can be done if the Goverament continue to be a special partper in the business and keeps out foreign competition by the $7 a ton duty. If rails can be made and sold to foreign consumers for $20 a ton it is obvious that the duty is quite unnecessary for the protection of the industry, and the domestic market can be supplied at the same price with a legitimate profit."

And the Steel Trust is but one of the many combinations that are using the United States tariff to bleed the consumer. The situation is instructive to Canadians.

I have claimed, and I thought rightly, too, that you were cool-headed, law-abiding and mild, so much so that even your clocks would not strike nor your dogs bite. I have maintained that, in general, Lindsay men were above the average, that they could run faster, shoot straighter, Jump further, sell louder, smile sweeter, dive deper and come up drier than any in the Midland counties. It is wanting in aplomb whatever that is - but it shows a grasp of opportunity that is brilliant, and which trait, if cultivated, may lead to larger things. Such eminent and esteemed former fellow-citizens as Mr. Bob Harrison and Mr. Patrick Clunan-gentlemen who stand high in the profession of applied sciwith leg and fist, distinctly pronounce it as decidedly bad form.
