Mr. Balfour Thought Russian Version of the Trawler Incident an Attack On Britain's Honor-Phantom Ships-Such An Admiral Could Not Pass Unscathed, Uuchallenged and Unpunished.

London, Oct. 29 .- All danger of war between Russia and Great Britain has been averted, and the settlement of the only points in dispute regarding the attack by Russia's second Pacific squadron on British trawlers, Oct. 21, has been referred to an international commission under The Hague Convention.

Premier Balfour, speaking at a meeting of the National Union of Conservative Clubs at Southampton last night, broke silence, "The Russian Ambassador," said Mr. Balfour, "has authorized a statement to the following effect: "The Russian Government, on hearing of the North Sea incident, at once expressed its profound regret and also promised most liberal compensation. The Government has ordered the detention at Vigo, of that part of the fleet which was concerned in the incident, in order that the naval authorities might ascertain what officers were responsible for it; that those officers and any material witnesses would not proceed on the voyage to the Far East; that inquiry would be instituted into the facts by an international commission as provided by The Hague Convention." "That," Mr. Balfour interpolated,

"had nothing to do with arbitration; it was the constitution of an international commission in order to find out the facts and any person found chants, of Lindsay, convened by The guilty would be tried and punished Retail Merchants Association of Can- adequately. believed the lamentable and deplorable tragedy of Oct. 21-22 would not end in war. The matter had been referred to an international commission, and both sides would abide by the decision of the international commission, which would consider all the questions at issue, thus war between the two great nations would be avoided without dishonor. There would also be a Board of Trade inquiry with, he hoped, the assistance of representatives of the Russian War between two great powers could not be raised without great danger to neutrals, but until last Monday (the day the news of the North Sea incident was made public), what neutral contemplated ever being fired upon and sunk during the progress of a peaceful vocation?

The report in the first instance was received with universal horror, indignation and surprise by the whole civilized world. Two stories had been put before them, as a result of which this matter was to be made the subject of impartial, international inquiry, although it was impossible to doubt which of the stories was

mr. Ballour thought that the difficruelty ought to be avoided by ery man who had the interests civilization or his own conscience at heart. It could not for a moment be supposed that throughout all channels of commerce from St. Petersburg to Vladivostock and the narrow ways of commerce like the English Channel and the Red Sea, an admiral of another power should be allowed to pass under such circumstances unscathed, unchallenged and unpunished after such a deed as that inquiry and had ordered the deten-

Mr. Balfour thought it must be admitted that the Russian Government had shown an onlightened desire that truth and justice should prevail. Only a few hours ago he should himself have taken a gloomy view of the culty was surmouned. At the same possibility of a satisfactory and time recklessness or indifference to peaceful solution. He thought the Emperor had shown himself an enlightened judge of what was right in the matter as between nation and nation. The Government had no desire to take advantage of Russia's difficulties to enforce its demands.
