ABOUT CATHOLIC LITERATURE

LECTURE BY REV. FR. O'SULLIVAN, OF ST. MARY'S,

Before the Literary Section of Peterboro T. A. S., Founded by Him.
As mentioned in Monday's issue of the Evening Post, Rev. Fr. O'Sullivan lectured that night in Peterboro. The Examiner publishes the following report:
The hall was, as many times before filled to its utmost capacity with a thoroughly appreciative audience, who listened attentively throughout to Rev. Father O'Sullivan's address. Father O'Sullivan, as founder of the society, is always a favorite with Peterboro people, and has taken a deep interest in the society and its efforts. His address on "Catholic Literature" Monday night was very appropriate, inasmuch as the T.A.S. is making an addition to its library. Father McCall presided during the evening, and the following clergy were also on the platform: Rev. Fathers Fitzpatrick, O'Brien, Brotherton, and the speaker of the evening, Rev. Father O'Sullivan.
THE LECTURE.
"After the grace of God flowing into our souls through the medium of prayer and the sacraments, I know of no more soothing solace than good books." Rev. Father O'Sullivan thus introduced his address on Catholic literature.
He first dealt with the study of the classics, that is, those works which remain as monuments of good literature. They were primarily the work of the ancient Romans and Greeks. These dead languages have a beneficial effect upon students, young and old. First, one easily gets the meaning of a word through its derivation. Thus, one who has studied the classics has a great command of, and an easy key to, many languages. Then it adds to one's speech. All great writers and orators have been students of the classics. An oration is often made now, every and emphatic by words acquired through a thorough knowledge of Latin and Greek. Pitt, Gladstone, and in our day, Laurier, all those famous men owe their oratorical reputation to a study of the classics. Literature and especially the classics. The speaker encouraged the young men to pursue this branch of study. It was one of the greatest means of fine, intellectual development.
In our own language there was three classes of literature and literary personages. The first was like Homer, Horace and Virgil, that is, they are the standard writers of English. The Bard of Avon, Milton, and other renowned English writers belong to this class. Then there is the literature of to-day. The popular authors writing books that will not endure. These are not worthy of perusal, for it is a waste of precious time. The market is flooded with them, and from an educational standpoint they are practically worthless. Then there are the works of the authors who have attained sufficient fame by the beauty of their works to be always remembered by the English people. They might be called the popular English classics. There is a great number of writers, such as Wordsworth, Tennyson, Keats, Macaulay, and on, and all these writings are held up as some of the most beautiful specimens of our language.
In the majority of these writings there is a materialism prevalent that was imparted by England's position as a leader in commerce and industry. This feature does not detract from the beauty of the writings. In the works of nearly all these men is found physical, intellectual and moral beauty, such as is obtained from a purely religious atmosphere. Many of them show the best of the old religion, and these are generally the most beautiful.
Wordsworth's "Sonnet to the Virgin Mary" was surely prompted through a love for Mary. It is as follows:
Mother whose virgin bosom was unstained
With the least shade of thought of sin alrod—
Woman! above all women glorified,
Our tainted nature's solitary boast,
and so on.
This and many more of Wordsworth's poems are colored with a thoroughly pure Catholic spirit.
One writer said: "The Catholic spirit still hovers in the clustered domes and alcoves of Oxford." He meant that the famous scholars of that time were imbued, to a certain degree with the spirit of Catholicity. The beauty of most of their works is the strong moral truth that is evident.
Then, coming down to our own time, among the many writers of today, there are some whose writings have the essentials to be called classics—Morris, Francis, Bacon, John Ruskin, and others who have given to the literary world writings that will always be read. Then there was Thomas D'Arcy McGee and Father Sheehan, and Father Benson, a son of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who has given to Catholic literature three of its best works.
The best book is that which upholds the intellect and strengthens the character. Therefore, the classics were the best reading for those who wished to be well educated. Father O'Sullivan again urged the young men and women to pursue this branch of study, and to get a practical outline of the best way to succeed in it.

Sir,—Will you kindly allow me space in your esteemed paper to express my heartfelt appreciation of the many evidences of the deep sympathy around by my recent bereavement. INDUSTRY WILL GO TO MONTREAL
Brantford Firm Objects to Sunday Law
A Brantford despatch says: The Pratt & Litchworth Malleable Iron Company, whose headquarters are at Buffalo, will remove their Brantford plant to Montreal, because of the interference with their Sunday operations by local representatives of the Lord's Day Alliance. The Brantford plant was established to meet the demand of the Canadian trade in 1889, and has been extended largely since that time. It has now an annual output of $200,000, employs over five hundred men steadily the year around, and pays $100,000 per year in wages. Recently the company was prosecuted for operating on Sunday. Officials of the firm claim there is a certain amount of work that must be done on Sunday in order to handle the weekly output. So incensed are the firm at the action of the local branch of the Alliance that they have determined to leave Brantford. The plant of another company has been located at Montreal, and the great bulk of local work will be transferred there. Probably three hundred men will have to go to Montreal or lose their employment. An effort will be made by the city to retain the firm, but the officials declare they are determined to move.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN VANCE.
Well Known Citizen of Manvers Suddenly Found on the Road.
Word was received in Lindsay this morning (Thursday) of the sad death of Mr. John Vance, of the township of Manvers, which occurred last evening a few miles from Bethany.

Mr. Vance left Bethany about 6.30 p.m., and was found lying in an unconscious condition on the roadside an hour later, with his horse standing almost on top of his body. He was found by Mr. J. Sisson, who conveyed him back to Bethany, where he died in the hotel stable. It is supposed that Mr. Vance had been seized with an attack of heart failure and that he had fallen out of the buggy.

The late Mr. Vance was a widely known farmer and was a frequent visitor to Lindsay. He was supposed to be the tallest man in the County. He had occupied various prominent positions in the municipal field in years gone by.

Fining the Man in Front of the Bar.
(Daily Consular and Trade Reports)
The strong feature of the New South Wales liquor law is that when a police is found on licensed premises during prohibited hours he must go before the court and prove himself to be a traveler or regular boarder or submit to a fine.

Correction.
In Tuesday's Council proceedings Mr. H. J. Lytle was inadvertently referred to as "assistant manager" of the Bank of Montreal. This is incorrect, as most of our readers know. Mr. Lytle is manager-in-chief, so to speak, of the Kent-st. branch, and if he noticed The Post's little slip we crave his forgiveness.

Bobbageon May Lose a Pastor.
Rev. W. C. Creighton, rector of Christ church, Bobbageon, for a number of years, will likely be asked to accept the rectorship of St. John's Anglican church at Lakefield, left vacant by the resignation of Ven. Archbishop Warren. Rev. C. H. Brooks, Graton; Rev. J. H. Toney, Omamee; Rev. W. L. Baynes, Reed, Norway; Rev. A. J. Reid, Campbelloff, were also talked of.

Bank From South America.
Mr. Glyde Gregory, travelling salesman for the Starling Boiler Co., New York, the largest firm of the kind in the United States, if not in the world, is spending a few days in town with his mother, sister and brothers. Glyde has just returned from his fourth or fifth visit to South America, this time spending some time in Uruguay. He will leave town for New York in the course of a week.

Capt. Parker, of the Dominion Fish Hatchery, Sandwich, Ont., expects to receive one hundred million whitefish fry from the Bay of Quinte, where the Government has ordered a closed season in order that it may secure the spawn without interference from fishermen. It has been impossible for some time past to secure a supply near Sandwich, and the stock of whitefish in the Detroit river having become almost depleted.
