LESSON FOR THE COUNCIL.

From the Machine Telephone Co. Level Down New Trenches.
The Board of Works of the Town Council can learn a very valuable lesson from the manner in which the Machine Telephone Co. leave the trenches after they put down their wires. The earth filled in is set and thoroughly pounded when set and then is broken, with the result that there will be no settlement of the levels or damage whatever. All persons breaking the town streets should be compelled to put the road in its original shape again.
If this plan had been adopted when the sewerage system was first commenced, in place of putting in foundations of laterals, that will cover the town, there would be many thousands of dollars saved.

Getting at the Housewife.

"If your product is used by the housewife you had better go straight to that lady and tell her about it," says Edmund Bartlett in "Selling More Goods." "She will listen. You needn't be a bit afraid she won't. Presumably Mr. Bartlett meant that your product is one that ought to be used by the housewife," and in that case his advice is good. The question with some producers is how to get at the housewife. The most tactful and profitable avenue of approach is the home newspaper, which she receives and consults on a friendly footing. Advertise in The Evening Post, which is read in most of the homes of Lindsay.

Youthful Sport.

"I don't need you, my boy," said the golf enthusiast on the links early in the morning when no one was about to witness his lack of skill. "Fifty cents isn't dear, but I'll go it alone," and as he spoke he made a tremendous swipe at the ball, missing it by a foot.
"I'll go around with you for a quarter, sir," said the caddy.
Again the amateur declined the caddy's attendance; and again he swung at the ball, with the same result.
"I'll go with you for 15 cents," said the boy.
This so rattled the newcomer that he made three more wild swings. The caddy, as he retreated a bit, called out:
"Say, mister, won't you take me round for nothing? I'll go for the far of it."

Old Memories.

Mr. Tompkins (reading from a paper)—"Married—Blanche de Snythe to Walter Wellington Beere. What the memories that name awakens!" Mr. Y. (blushing)—"I never imaged I knew of any engagement to Blanche."
Mr. Z. (chillingly)—"I was alluding to 'Blanche'."

Fading of a Hero.

Peterborough Examiner, Monday: Mr. John Irwin, trainmaster, of the G.T.R., Lindsay, informed the Examiner to-day that the stories of heroism on the part of Willie Kewzan, in connection with the burning of the bridge on the Grand Trunk, near Stirling, are exaggerated. The train crew, of the train from Belleville, he stated, knew of the condition of the bridge, and the only train that was in danger was the afternoon train from Peterboro.

Problems for the Wino.

A philosopher writing to an American paper asks:
Why is it a careless 7-year-old kid can drop a half-burned match in a silo and burn up all the barns in a block, while an albe-headed man has to use up a whole box of matches to get a wood fire started in a neat room that has draft enough to draw all the furniture up the stovepipe? Why does it take eighteen men twenty minutes to get a call off a railroad track, while a more spruce on a rail will send a ninety-ton locomotive into the ditch?

Curious Accident at Sunderland.

Mr. Manse Oliver, baker, at Sunderland, had a bad accident Friday in the big swamp east of the village. While driving his team along the road, which runs through the swamp, one of the horses stumbled and fell. Mr. Oliver freed it from the harness and tried to get it up, but in its struggles to raise it slid over the slope of the road into a deep ditch full of water. The reins, which were fastened to the dash, then pulled the animal's head back under its shoulder in such a way that its head was buried in the mud and water. Before any assistance could be effectually rendered, the animal had drowned itself. This is one of the most remarkable accidents which has taken place in that locality in years.
