We're all in this together! Nowhere does this phrase apply more than to prevent the spread of COVID-19 in the community.

If you are a resident, following simple prevention tips helps protect your health and the wellbeing of others around you. Understanding and following current COVID-19 restrictions and their impacts on programs and services in your community is also important.

For community groups, knowing what preventive measures and protections to put in place are essential to reduce the risk from COVID-19 for staff, volunteers and clients.

Whether an individual or organization, discover tips, information and resources on this page to help you navigate your way through the current pandemic.
