

COVID-19 and weigh in on options for their education.

Any decision that places a child's physical and mental health at severe risk should not be taken lightly, and policy-makers and parents alike should consider the voices of those most affected – the children themselves.

Sydney Chapados, Doctoral Fellow, Sociology, Carleton University

This article is republished from The Conversation under a Creative Commons license. Read the original article.