

Campbell says CUPE is very concerned about the custodial workload, and by extension, their ability to keep the school cleaned and disinfected to ensure that staff and students are safe.

“These new positions will build public confidence, assist with school reopening, keep staff and students safe and assist with student learning,” added Campbell, who has been actively trying to engage the board to “post and fill these needed custodial positions with the funding provided by the ministry.”