

NEWS

Vehicle licence plate stickers and temporary driver's licences extended during COVID-19

By Marta Marychuk Caledon Enterprise

Monday, November 16, 2020

Expiration dates for driver's licence stickers, temporary driver's licences and some health cards are just a few of the services being extended by the provincial government to help limit the spread of COVID-19.

Any of these licences that expired March 1 or later will continue to remain valid and legal past the expiry date, according to the province's website. The provincial government is asking Ontario residents not to visit a ServiceOntario centre, unless it is absolutely necessary.

Driver's licences can be renewed online at www.ontario.ca/page/renew-expired-drivers-licence. Some health cards have an extended expiry date until further notice. The province will notify people when they should renew.

New vehicles and vehicles that don't have licence plates are the exception and would continue to require a visit to ServiceOntario. Some ServiceOntario locations are closed and others are operating with reduced hours. To find out which location are open visit www.ontario.ca/locations/serviceontario.

The full list of provincial documents that are being extended are:

- driving instructor (DI) licence and driving schools, Ontario Photo Card (OPC)