

NEWS

Pregnant, breastfeeding and immunocompromised people no longer excluded from getting COVID-19 vaccine in Ontario

By May Warren Toronto Star

Friday, January 8, 2021

Pregnant, breastfeeding and immunocompromised people will now be able to get the COVID-19 vaccine in Ontario, if they choose to, according to new guidance from the Ministry of Health.

It's a change from a previous policy, which excluded these groups because they were not included in clinical safety trials for both the Pfizer and Moderna vaccine. As the Star reported last week, the old provincial guidance had resulted in some inconsistencies across hospitals.