

around, both educators and students have much more experience using the virtual learning technology.

The Trillium Lakelands District School Board has not suggested that teachers request students bring home work on Friday (April 9), but district manager of communications services Catherine Shedden noted pivoting to at-home learning if directed to do so would be done quickly, and much the same way as an inclement weather day.

Kawartha Pine Ridge District School Board shared a reminder to staff and families prior to the Easter holiday to prepare what they need if a decision is made to pivot to online learning.
