Englishman Tells How Lacrosse Is Played To-day

By Parke Cummings in "Judge"

Lacrosse is the great spring game at many colleges nowadays, being exceeded in popularity only by golf, baseball, tennis, rowing, track, and being called to the dean's office. It was invented by the North American Indians who also invented scalping, but as the Indian became civilized he abandoned lacrosse. It was, however, adopted by the white man who also adopted poison gas, submarines and aerial warfare.

Lacrosse is played with twelve (or maybe it's fifteen) men on a side, and is played until they have all run themselves ragged or knocked each other's heads off. The implement supplied for this is an extremely heavy wooden bat strung with snow-shoe strings. Players are also allowed to catch the ball in this webbing, but they are always too busy banging each other over the head. Which may explain why veteran lacrosse players so often make ideal Congressmen in later life.

Another interesting feature about this pastime is that there are no limits to the width of the field, and run often progressing literally clear over to the next county and sometimes into its jail. Needless to say, it requires a great deal of wind to play this game—this also goes to substantiate what we said about Congressmen. Lacrosse players wear heavy caps, like polo players, but it's more fun to be kicked in the head by a horse than clubbed by a lacrosse bat. In the former case there's the consolation that the horse didn't mean it.

Will Rogers
Extols Canada's Banking System

Canada's banking system appeals to Will Rogers, cowboy humorist who handed the United States bankers in convention in California the sage advice to go home via Canada and learn something about real safe and sane banking. "I hope that they go back via Canada and see how it is that Canada has only had one bank failure in ten years. The idea evidently is not copyrighted."

Rev. Monsignor McColl, Lindsay, was in town on Monday and paid a short visit to his brother, Mr. J. B. McColl.

Belonged to Entire Archdiocese

From the New York press the Cobourg World has received, through the courtesy of a friend a description of the impressive funeral accorded an old Cobourg boy. Rev. Father Francis P. Duffy, of whom we are all proud. It is as follows:

"President Hoover paid tribute to the Rev. Dr. Francis P. Duffy, wartime chaplain of the 'Fighting Sixty-ninth' Regiment and pastor of Holy Cross Church, 331 West Forty-second Street, who died early Sunday morning in St. Vincent's Hospital.

"The President sent the following telegram to Mrs. Michael L. Bird of 1,065 Crofona Avenue, the Bronx, only sister of Father Duffy:

The White House,
June 27, 1932.

"I am deeply grieved to learn of the death of your brother, the universally beloved Francis P. Duffy. I had the pleasure of his acquaintance. I share the admiration he inspired in all who knew him by his joyous humanity and his unlimited interest in and devotion to the happiness and well-being of others. He will be sorely missed.

Faithfully yours,

HERBERT HOOVER.

"The funeral of Father Duffy took place in St. Patrick's Cathedral, rather than in the Holy Cross Church, of which he has been in charge for the last twelve years. This decision was made by the Most Rev. John J. Dunn, Auxiliary Bishop and Vicar General of the Archdiocese of New York, who was in complete charge in the absence of Cardinal Hayes. The solemn high mass of requiem was held at 10 o'clock.

"In making this decision Bishop Dunn was guided by the fact that Father Duffy because of years of military service and his presidency of the Catholic Summer School of America, belonged not to one parish, but to the entire archdiocese. The sermon was delivered by Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of the cathedral.

"The body of Rev. Father Duffy was removed from the Holy Cross Church, his own sanctuary, which was also too small for the services, at 9 o'clock on the morning of the funeral, under an escort of the 69th regiment and other military associates, to the cathedral.

"Bishop Dunn received the following cablegram from Cardinal Hayes, who is in Dublin.

"Shocked at the news of Chaplain Duffy's death. Personally I shall miss him greatly. He was a tower of strength. New York will without doubt pay him worthy tribute. The Church will long mourn the loss of a

Annual Fish Dinner at Sunset View Cottage

The Ministerial Association of East and West Northumberland and parts of Durham and Peterboro Counties met for their annual fish dinner and picnic at Sunset View Cottage, Presque Point on Tuesday, June 28, and spent a very pleasant day around the dinner table and on the grounds in sports. Rev. R. A. Whittam of Toronto, gave a very interesting and reminiscent address and after congratulatory and appreciative remarks had been made by several of the members, Rev. A. K. McLeod, B.A., Brighton, presented the secretary-treasurer, Rev. M. W. Leigh, B.A., Hilton, with an envelope containing a sum of money as a souvenir of his four years' service as Sec-treas. and as host to the Association at his cottage and expressive of their best wishes for a happy future in his home in Kingston. Ministers were present from Norwood, Havelock, Cobourg, Grafton, Colborne, Trenton, Smithsfield and Brighton.

Laid Corner-Stone

The corner-stone of the present St. George's Church, Newcastle, was laid seventy-five years ago last Saturday, by the late Hon. G. S. Boulton of Cobourg, who gave the site for the building. Services to commemorate the event were held at Newcastle Sunday.

WHEN THE PAPER DOESN'T COME

Father says the paper he reads ain't put-up right—
He finds a lot of fault, he does, per- using it all night.
He says there ain't a single thing in it worth while to read—
And that it doesn't print the kind of stuff the people need.
He tosses it aside and says its strictly on the "Bum"
But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.
He reads about the weddings, and he snorts like all get out.
He reads the social doings with a most derisive shout.
He says they make the papers for the women folk alone—
He reads about the parties, and he'll fume and fret and groan.
He says of information it doesn't have a crumb—
But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.
He's always first to grab it and he reads it right plumb through—lawn and beautiful gardens, then down a side street to the beach. Many of the streets leading down to the lake have a cement walk on one side only, the other side having a parking or boulevard of green grass. I, of course, chose the grass side to walk on, it is so soft and springy.
He doesn't miss an item or a word—that is true.—Exchange.

"I walked down to the beach, and it was gorgeous down there. I stood on a ledge of shaley rock with the water almost to the toes of my shoes, and watched the breakers come dashing in. They looked so alive running in before the wind, one almost seemed to hear them shouting, "Hurrah, this is fun!" And the clouds scurrying across the sky made lovely shadows on the water—purple and dark blue and gray. Where the sun shone on the small waves, further out, they sparkled and danced like mad. The wind was too keen to tempt one in to swim, but it would have been fun to go dashing through the surf with a gay companion. But I was alone, so I just sat on the sand under a low willow tree, sheltered from the wind by a hillock of sand, just drinking it all in. Near the shore the water was a gorgeous blue-green, with flecks of milky white foam. At the right was the lighthouse gleaming like a pyramid of snow against the blue water, and on the left the horizon stretching away, apparently to infinity.

"If only there wasn't such things as "economic depression" to mar one's joy, what a paradise this world could be—that is, to one who appreciates and loves the beauty that is free for all to enjoy—depression or no depression! especially on a day like this."

Distracting Inadequacy:
"It is breakfast time, and the old drop-leaf table is set beside the huge fire-place. The logs are blazing, a way in the grate and everything is quiet and cozy.

"Although it is almost ten o'clock I am still in my kimono, too comfortable and happy to be tempted out of doors by the bright sunlight and the gentle breeze stirring the trees. The trees frame a lovely picture of a strip of yellow beach and dark blue water flecked with white foam. I want to begin painting and never stop when I see that gorgeous blue and green and white ensemble. But the beauty of it makes me feel my utter inadequacy to capture it on canvas. Perhaps I shall be able to do it from memory sometime. It is less distracting to do it that way, and I find I sometimes can grasp and hold a more "real" picture in my mind's eye than even a camera could give.

"I'm going to try a sketch of the old English Church this morning on King St., opposite the Park, so I must have my breakfast and be off."

"The body of Rev. Father Duffy was removed from the Holy Cross Church, his own sanctuary, which was also too small for the services, at 9 o'clock on the morning of the funeral, under an escort of the 69th Regiment and other military associates to the cathedral.

"Bishop Dunn received the following telegram from Cardinal Hayes who is in Dublin.

"Shocked at the news of Chaplain Duffy's death. Personally I shall miss him greatly. He was a tower of strength. New York will without doubt pay him worthy tribute. The Church will long mourn the loss of a most devoted son.

"Bishop Dunn paid this tribute to Father Duffy:

"With the entire country, but especially those in the immediate community who knew him intimately, the Catholic Archdiocese of New York is sharing its sorrow and loss in the death of Father Duffy.

"From far and near telegrams and letters expressing deepest sympathy have been coming in a constant stream, a splendid and spontaneous tribute to one of God's noblemen.

"Father Duffy was loved by all classes and conditions and one of his proudest boasts was that he knew them and they knew him.

"He was a great priest, a chaplain idolized by the men of the old regiment, a ripe scholar and a gentleman of finest sympathy. Without the slightest exaggeration we shall not look upon his like again.

"We pray that his noble soul may soon be in the peace and rest of the Lord whom he so generously and splendidly served."

Tribute Over Radio

"A memorial service for Father Duffy was held over Station WOP as a tribute to a great priest and patriot." Major Jerome B. Crowley of the 156th Infantry spoke for his fellow military officers and associates. The Rev. Dr. Samuel Trexler, president of the United Lutheran Synod of New York, himself an A. E. F. chaplain, spoke on behalf of the Protestant faith, and Rabbi Benjamin S. Tintner, national chaplain of the reserve officers, represented the Jewish faith.

"The final speaker was the Rev. John B. Kelly, spiritual director of the Catholic Writers' Guild, who was a life-long personal friend of Dr. Duffy.

"A. O. Brown, shepard of the Lambs, issued the following tribute from the executive offices, 130 West Forty-fourth Street:

"Every actor, author, composer and lay member of the Lambs deeply feels the loss of one of its most beloved and honored members."

"All day Monday, as on Sunday afternoon, a line of parishioners, military men and other friends passed into the rectory. Through the night members of the Holy Name Society and members of the Sixty-ninth Regiment in relays formed a guard of honor about the coffin.

MARKETING ONTARIO FRUIT

One result of the depression is the increased work in systematic marketing. The latest manifestation of this is the announcement of Col. Thomas L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, to extend the present fruit selling organization in the other Canadian provinces. This will be effected through the Ontario Growers' Markets Council.

Permanent commercial representatives are to be stationed in Winnipeg, Montreal and the Maritimes, during the selling season, while efforts in Great Britain are to be increased in order to supply best quality produce, shipped in the most satisfactory manner.

Srenuous endeavors will be made on the Prairies to regain the market enjoyed by Ontario in years gone by. British Columbia is a large fruit producer, and Ontario, despite the excellent reputation of its fruits, will have a powerful opposition, especially when it comes to packing, and maintaining standards. Our small fruits, cherries and strawberries in particular, and our hamper packed apples as well as peaches, pears and plums, should appeal to Western people, many of whom formed an appetite for such delicacies before moving from Ontario to the prairies.

Montreal is a market for all varieties of Ontario produce. A commercial representative in that city can do much towards promoting orderly marketing, preventing gluts and price cutting, and adjusting claims on an equitable basis.
