hair, with a caressing movement.

The young man stood before her in all the unconscious pride of his golden beard, open brow, and straight features, which were an expression of hauteur and vexation at the moment.

while his blue eyes dwelt with fascination on her slightest ges-

He drew her once more close to his side. "Dolores, you are a wee bit flighty to-night, but you must be rea-

"I am reasonable, and not at al

"You belong to me. You are to be

"Shall we ever grow old, like grand-

"We must grow old in our own fash-

Dolores recoiled and unfurled her fan. 'Let us always remain young,'

his nand without attering a word.

alluring, tempting, almost feline.

wreck on the other side of the road.

Dolores cast a bewildered glance at

"You are a good little girl not to scold me for such clumsiness." he said.

with real, or assumed contrition for an ebullition of temper. "I did not eves flashed. Then she burst into

She fled away swiftly, closely followed by her little dog, and Lieut.

He waited irresolutely for a time,

then departed, tantalized yet triumphant, with the shy, half-unconscious smile and a song. He would make all right on the morrow with the pur-

Little did he foresee the events of

A cloud swept over the moon's disk, like a veil. The gate of the garden opened, a figure emerged, noiselessly,

CHAPTER VIL

Expulsion.

COULTD NO

eave the poor fan

lying out there in the road," Dolores pillow when she

Then she sought morning.

the fragments beneath the same pillow, where she had placed them on the previous night before going to sleep.

she had returned in search of the

Her slumters bad been broken by chase and presentation of a new fan.

have another to-morrow."

she insisted, with a return of fantastic

"Dolores, give me that confounded

"Listen to me, darling-"

noble you are!" she sighed.

sonable---

"I listen!"

"No! No!"

frail treasure.

cast it away?"

"No."

ardent kiss.

passionate sobs

swiftly withdrew.

in the tranquil waters.

any gift of mine?"

papa?" meditatively.

ion," he replied evasively.

flighty."

CHAPTER XL-(Continued.)

He approached the gate, and was about to knock, when he saw a little figure flitting along the path before him. He recognized Dolores. Why was she roaming abroad alone on the roads at this hour? Was she watching for him? The young man hastened toward her, then paused at the angle of the wall to look at her.

Dolores stood in an open space of the path, waving a fan. Her shadow was projected on the ground behind her in a long, wavering line. The dog Florio sat beside her, gravely looking gaiety.

The girl's face and arms, bathed by the moonlight, had the purity of alabaster in contrast with the luxuriant masses of her black hair, and her eyes were dreamy, as if she moved in a reverse. She talked to Florio in a low tone, and occasionally laughed. Now she advanced, mincingly, with skirts outspread, and profound curtsies, wielding the fan, with natural grace, in her right hand, as if at a presentation. Again she abandoned herself to a gliding dance measure, wreathing her arms above her head, with the glittering fan held high in the air.

The childish vanity of smile and posture were obvious. She imagined herself to be once more at a ball and in a theater.

The spectator found the mere contemplation of her light movements bewitching, but he longed to clasp her in his arms. "Dolores!"

She started, and came toward him, with an exclamation of pleasure. Florio barked sharply.

"Are you glad to see me again?" he inquired eagerly, selding her hands. "Oh, yes!"

"Did you expect me to-night? feared I should not be able to get off.

"I always expect you." Then there was a moment of soft silence between them, during which he twined her arm around his neck, pressed her little head against his broad breast, and showered kisses on her hair.

Dolores drew back half troubled, haif ashamed, and, inspired by an ina barrier between them.

coaxing accents. 'The garden is too from the depths. Bursts of maudlin small, so I came out here to play with song and jest were occasionally audi- rand. it in the moonlight." "Have you met any one on the harbor dreamed above their reflections rond?" "No one. The people are all in the town at this hour. "The fan is very fine. The grand duke sent it to you at the door of the theater."

Dolores elevated her delieately arched eyebrows in surprise. "You noticed the messenger, then?"

"Of course I saw him," warmly.

"The prince broke my old fan, and he was very kind to remember the accident," innocently.

Lieut Curzon looked at the rich toy earelessly. The moonlight shimmered on pearl, tortoise shell and feathers, with a pictured design worthy of Comte Nils, or of Rudeaux, on one Tiny points of silver, or steel, sown over the surface, glittered in the moon's ray, as if diamond insects hovered and escaped with every turn of the happy owner's flexible wrist. A subtle perfume emanated from the downy margin.

"I will give you a dozen fans if you The moon had become hidden by wish," said the sailor, in a slightly ag- clouds at the opportune moment when grieved tone.

behold her cherishing the quite un- thur Curzon, and even defiance of him, confront him in a fit of anger. She warrantable gift of another man.

zling gleam of snowy teeth between on the unreasonable and exacting quail. She rose to her feet, trembling red lips, and turned her head, archly. character of man. The garrulous in every limb, and averted her head. At the same time she clasped, provok- moods and prevalent crossness of The crisis was terribly brief. mely, the princely souvenir to her grandpapa was a different matter.

she leaned toward him, and passed her nature. an, play fally, over his curling those confused and intermittent sounds below stairs, which indicated that Jacob Dealtry was roaming about the Watch Tower.

agitated dreams and feverish starts of wakefulness, when she had listened to ure seemed to stand on the threshold of her chamber and reproach her for some fault. His voice was muffled, vague and monotonous, like the rhythm of the distant sea. She could not distinguish his words. What had she done? Dolores could not understand.

She rose, made her simple toilet, and ate her frugal breakfast with a healthy, young appetite. Her grandfather had been up for hours. He did not notice her. The amenities of conversation were rare between them.

The girl took the fan in her hand, and contemplated it with sadness. She shed a few tears over the wreck. Ah, how beautiful it had been only the previous night, with the moonlight sparkling on the span. gled surface! The fingers that crushed the pearl and tortoiseshell structure must have been very strong, and the anger of Arthur Curzon deep. Did she not feel some sweet, feminine docility of subjection to the muscles of this Samson?

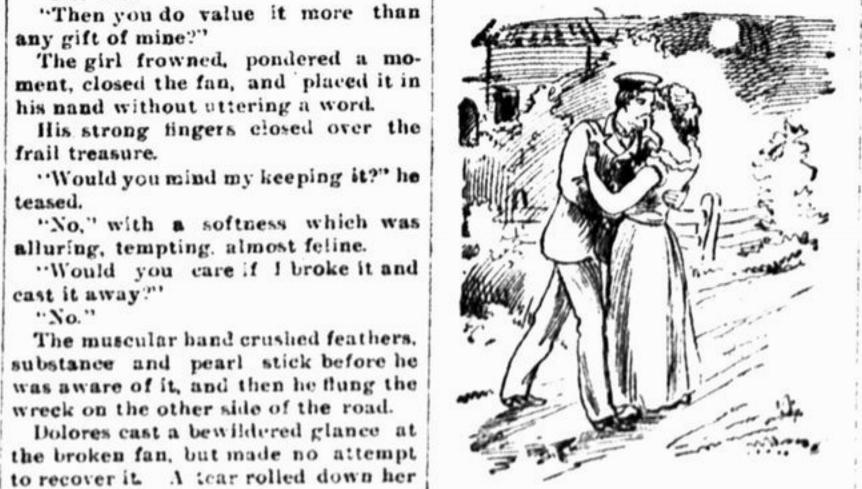

'He was jealous," said Dolores, Lloud, and a dimple deepened in her soft ckeek.

my wife. We will live and die to-She glanced at a little mirror; already she was a woman. The discovery frightened and enchanted her. The broken fan still claimed her sor> rowful tenderness and regret. "What shall I do with it?" she demanded of the Knight of Malta, pausing before the picture.

> The Knight was mute.

She went out into the garden, irreselutely. A bee from his hive in the

"HIS ARMS WERE AROUND HER." rear of the Tower settled on her wrist She did not fear the insect. The bees made famous honey.

"What shall I do with the fan?" she intend to crush the thing. You shall repeated, obeying a childish impulse His arms were around her, his cheek to question Fate.

rested against her face, his mouth! The bee was mute, and, after basksought her trembling lips in a long, ing, a downy, golden body, on the extended arm for a moment, spread gos-For a time she yielded passively to samer wings, and flew away, as if his embrace, then she slipped away about to keep a business appointment and paused a few paces from him. She in the kingdom of the thyme.

"What shall I do with the fan?" the trembled and grew pale, her black girl inquired of the pigeons, the flowers, the dog. "You were cruel to break it" she

The pigeons ceased to coo, and looked at her with bright eyes: the flowers swaved on their fragile stalks, and hung their heads, languid with Curzon heard the gate shut behind her. their own fragrance.

Florio bounded through the reeds, and again emerged, uttering a sharp bark, as if to claim her attention for kiss of Dolores still lingering on his the retreat which he had discovered in lips. Love had come to him with a the middle of the clump of plants.

Dolores caught up the little animal, and bestowed her usual caress, a kiss on the nose. 'The very spot." she exclaimed. 'I will bury the fan. Florio knows more than the pigeous, or the bees

She glanced about in search of her grandfather. She had once offended glided along the boundary wall, groped him by digging at the roots of his in the path for some object, and as flowers and attempting to bury a broken doll. Now she would ask him The splendor of the night deep to accord her a tiny corner for the stinct of coquetry, once more unfurled ened. The white hamlets slept, as if fan's grave. The gate was half open. her fan, making of the fragile weapon | they were the tombs of the inmates, | She looked out, and beheld the old and the sea heaved and sparkled in man traversing the path in the direc-"Look at my new fan," she said, in the track of leviathan about to rise tion of the high road. He was evidently bound She must await ble in the port, while the ships of the return. When would he return though? Surely there could be no harm in hiding away the fan among the canes! Her life had been so meager of incident, that this one acquired importance in her estimation. Impatience overcame all scruple: She once more sought and found a broken, rusty knife, and, kneeling, thrust her arm through the barrier of | doing. I have given up balls and parties stems to scoop out a little hole in the earth. The clump of canes should shelter the spot.

The task was rudely interrupted. A claw-like hand grasped her shoulder, and she was dragged back with Jacob Dealtry had entered the enclosure, and discovered her occupaconfided to her tion. He pounced upon his grand. child in an access of fury. "You jade" You devil's imp! What are you about. awakened the next

The words seemed to hiss in her ear. awakening painful memories.

"I am not harting the flowers in the very least, grandpapa," she protested, in an aggrieved tone. She was older and stronger than when she had attempted to inter Yes, he was piqued and irritated to treasure. There was treason to Ar- the doll, and need not fear to in the act. For the first time in her must learn to brave him. Neverthe-Dolores smiled, with a sudden, daz- young life she was required to ponder less, the rage of the old man made her

One moment a white face confronted Her admiration of the handsome offi- her, with the pinched features drawn dozen fans would be too many, cer, and the affect onate gratitude and contracted, and a pair of gleamonly what happiness to take up one or awakened in her heart by his ing eyes projecting from the sockets. snother at pleasure. No! You must geniality and generosity, were mere and the next she was thrust out of the sort touch me a rain."

surface ripples of sentiment as yet in gate, with her dog, and the holts

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

From the German.

Drill Sergeant (to awkward recruit)-You unmitigated rhinoceros.if you don't quit flinging your legs around as if you were trying to catch flies with them, I'll hit you a whack on the top of your In addition, the Cavalier of the pict- fool head that will knock the birds at the antipodes out of their nests.

Rough on Men.

He-Ha! ha! ha! Here is a good hit in this paper at the female sex.

She-What does it say about the wo-He-It says that more than half the women in this country are crazy. She (with a sigh)-I expect that's so. There are a great many married women in this country.

A Lawyer Baffled.

Jim McSnifter was being tried in San Antonio, Texas, for trying to bribe a colored witness, Sam Johnsing, to testify falsely. "You say this defendant offered you a bribe of fifty dollars to testify in his behalf?" said Lawyer Gouge to Sam

Johnsing. "Yes, sah."

"Now repeat precisely what he said, using his own words." "He said he would git me fifty dollars if I--"

"He can't have used those words. He didn't speak as a third person."

"No, sah; he tuck good keer dat dar was no third pusson present. Dar was only us two. De 'fendent am too smart ter hab anybody listenin' when he am talking about his own reskelity." "I know that well enough, but he spoke to you in the first person, didn't "I was de fust pusson myself."

"You don't understand me, When he was talking to you did he use the words, 'I will pay you fifty dollars?' " "No, boss, he didn't say nuffin' about you payin' me fifty dollars. Your name , wasn't mentioned, 'ceptin' dat he tole me ef eber I got inter a scrape dat you was de best lawyer in San Antoino to fool the judge and jury. He said you was good at almost any kind of res-

"You can step down."-Texas Sift-

Breathes there a man with soul so dead, Who never to his neighbor said. When in close confab, close toggether-When in close confab, both together-"Naow isn't this darnation weather?" -Texas Siftings.

A Mere Suggestion.

First New Yorker-There is some talk of introducing female street car conductors over in Brooklyn.

Second New Yorker-That would never do. The cars would be so crowded with soft-eyed dudes and bald-headed mashers that a respectable old washer woman or a wet nurse with twins would stand no earthly chance of getting a seat .- Texas Siftings.

Getting Used to It.

A rich man once fived near a tanner, and not being able to bear the unpleasant smell of the tanyard, he pressed his neighbor to quit the business or move away. The tanner put off his departure, saying that he would move soon. But as he still continued to stay as time went on, the rich man became accustomed to the smell, and feeling no manner of inconvenience, made no further

This fable explains why the rich men and heavy tax payers in so many cities of the United States make no earnest effort to remove corrupt administrations. They, the tax payers, have become accustomed to the bad smell, and although they know there is "something rotten in Denmark," they make no fur-

Cold Comfort.

"The weather we have been having will make ice cheap.

"I don't know about that. Very likely they will claim that much of the ice crop in the Hudson river was badly injured by the frost and that prices will be higher next summer."

Society Note.

Mrs. Churchly-Christian people ought to do penance and set a good example to their neighbors during Lent." Mrs. Worldly-That's just what I am and taken to progressive euchre, which is not a matter of public notoriety.

Diabolical Suggestion

Kosciusko Jones is an amateur writer of plays. He wrote a very sad tragedy and it was brought out by some local amateurs-but the public expressed their disapprobation. Jones was indig-

"The New York public are a set of fools," he exclaimed. "I'll tell you how you can get even with them," said Gus De Smith. "How?" "They laughed at your tragedy; now you write a comedy and see if that doesn't take the laugh out of them. Make them feel bad. Make them cry. Write a comedy and spring it on them.' -Texas Siftings.

Strained and Unnatural.

The wife of a New York bank cashler remarked at the supper table: "Have you read the late novel by Wilkins Jones?"

"Haven't read it." "Well, there is a cashler of a bank in it, just like you. He is honest and faithful and does not run off with his employer's money."

"That's the way it is with those novelists. They are so unnatural and improbable in their descriptions of men." N. B.-Since the above was written the cashier has disappeared and an examination of his books shows a large shortage.

Is absolutely necessary in order to have good health. The greatest affliction of the human race is impure blood.

There are about 2400 disorders incident to the human frame, the large majority arising from the impure or poisonous condition of the blood.

eases is found in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story.

No remedy has ever had so marked success, or won such enormous sales. to its potent powers, blood poisoning Protestant church, and it affords me much and salt rheum and many other diseases general Spring Medicine to remove all as a safe, sure remedy. Even my wife, are permanently cured by it. For a those impurities which have accumu- after taking Hood's, became healthy and lated during the winter, or to overcome fleshy and has the bloom of girlhood again," That Tired Feeling, nothing equals

"I wish to say that three years ago we had a beautiful boy born to us. At the age of 11 months he breathed his last, a victim to impure blood. On Aug. 4, 1991, another boy was born, who at the age of two months became afflicted with the same disease. We believed the trouble was constitutional, and not common sore mouth. I procured a bottle The best remedy for all blood dis- of Hood's Sarsaparilla and commenced to give it regularly to both mother and baby. Im-Its remarkable cures are its loudest provement began at once. We have succeeded praise. It is not what we say but in eradicating the scrofulous blood from the system, and to-day we are blessed with a nice, fat baby boy, 18 months old-the very

Picture of Health, all life and full of mischief-thanks to Hood's Scrofula in its severest forms yields | Sarsaparilla. I am a minister in the Methodist pleasure to recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to Rev. J. M. Pate, Brookline Station, Missourt.

Protected Against Oyster Thieves. Private oyster beds in the upper Virginia waters of the Chesapeake have been successfully protected against oyster thieves by a simple but ingenious device. The owner of the beds, sixteen acres in area, crossed them in two directions with %-inch wire secured to posts at the point of intersection. Both wires and posts were invisible. The oyster pirate that attacks the bed is sure sooner or later to lose his dredge by having it entangled in the wire, and thefts are rare.

Interesting Facts. The manufacturer who is watching the progress of the times, is always on the lookout for changing conditions, and such a man naturally turns to the locality where he finds the raw material, and easy access to markets for his products.

The State of Wisconsin offers great opportunities.

Tributary to the railroad of the Wisconsin Central Lines, which traverse the center of the State, there are unlimited forests of Pine, Hemlock. Birch, Maple, Basswood, Oak, Elm and other hardwoods; Mines of Iron Ore of quality unsurpassed, already shipping several millions tons per annum. Tan Bark for Tanneries.

Granite and Lime Stone Quarries. Farm lands unequaled for raising of grain of all kinds as well as root We are developed and wish to expand and show what our line can do. Write us if you wish to locate manufactory or farm, or intend to travel. C. L. WELLINGTON. W. H. KILLEN. Traffic Manager Industrial tommissioner.

H. F. WHITCOMB. J. C. POND. Gen ! Pass. Agent. General Manager. MILWAUKEE, WIS. A NEW RAILROAD TO THE GULF.

Millions of Acres of Wild I and Opened for Settlement in the South. The newest and greatest railroad proect in the United States to-day is the Kansas City, Pittsburg and Gulf Air Line Railroad from Kansas City to the Gulf of Mexico. It is building down the lines of Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, the Indian Territory, Texas and Louisiana, nearly 300 miles of which is now completed and in operation, and active work is now going on in its extension. It opens up one of the best farming, fruit, stock, mining and timber countries in America; in which there are millions of acres of wild and government lands. No country offers such rare opportunities to the farmer, stockman, fruit grower, gardener and investor. It offers the greatest variety in climate, soil, yet opened by any railroad. A copy of the Missouri and Arkansas FARMER AND FRUITMAN giving complete description of the country mailed free, upon application to F. A. HORNBER, Land Commissioner, 7th & Wyandotte Sts., Kansas City, Mo.

products and resources of any country

When shad first made their appearance in California they were worth $1.29

KIDNEY, BLADDER At Bruggista, 50c & 01. Advice & Pamphlet free. Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Cole's New Domestic Coffee Berry.

Better Than a Gold Mine. pound. Let high tariff store coffee go. The poor man's friend and rich man's delight. Matures north or south in four months. Plant any time up to the 20th of June: 20,000 farmers supplied and every one praises it. Has produced store coffee. Produces two crops a year in the south. Lance packet postpaid 20cts; or enough to plant 2m hills 50 cts or stamps. Wil make 200 pots of most delicious coffee, good enough for a king. Is superseding store coffee as fast as its merits become known. Large catalogue of 50 new varieties of seeds and testimonials from patrons all over the Union seat free with each order by Buckner Mo. farention, Send for "Inten ors Guide, or How to Get to l'atent." PATRICE OF ASSELL, WASHINGTON, D.

St. Jacobs Oil is made to cure

HAVE YOU FIVE-OR MORE COWS

74 CORTLANDT ST., NEW YORK. ELGIM, ILL.

Consumption was formerly pronounced incurable. Now it is not. In all of the early stages of the disease

Scott's Emulsion

will effect a cure quicker than any other known specific. Scott's Emulsion promotes the making of healthy lung-tissue, relieves inflammation, overcomes the excessive waste of the disease and gives vital strength.

For Coughs, Colds, Weak Lungs, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Consumption, Scrofula, Anamia, Loss of Flesh and Wasting Diseases of Children. Buy only the genuine with our trademark on salmon-colored wrapper.

Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50 cents and $1.

Send for pamphlet on Scott's Emulsion. FREE.