

IN THE ODD CORNER.

SOME QUEER AND CURIOUS PHASES OF LIFE.

How a Wyoming Hanging Was Done to Slow Music—Travels of a Bullet—Do Foxes Enjoy the Hunt?—The Editor's Apology.

FROM dainty feet to parted hair. My lady is a sun-beam snare; And all the flowers look up at her.

In midair poised to hear her sing. The skylark hovers quivering. And all the leaves that shift and sigh.

Seem whispering of her loveliness, While softest winds her curls caress, And kiss her mouth as oft as if

All men and women as we meet Are glad and swift to serve my sweet; And others crushed in crowded marts, lunk low in sin and misery, Jer hly hands lift tenderly— And these, too, call her "Queen of Hearts."

Hanged to Slow Music.

In the early days of Wyoming, when there were but few churches and many infractions of law, a man by the name of Barstow, who never knew fear, and was a devout Christian, was elected to the office of sheriff.

The fact that there was no minister within reach preyed upon the mind of the sheriff, who undertook to supply the lack by holding an hour's Bible reading in the condemned man's cell and praying with him.

He again appeared at the docks and attempted to steal aboard the steamship Trave. She was not at first recognized, owing to her rich attire.

Destruction Caused by Bagpipes. A Scotch Highlander, dressed in kilts and carrying a set of bagpipes under his arm, appeared at Bar Harbor.

Travels of a Bullet.

R. H. Campbell of the Madras Civil corps tells of an incident which came under his official notice as magistrate of Hosan, Madras.

In a valley 1,500 yards away beyond two rather high hills and a little beyond, a native was standing with his head bowed and hands clasped behind his back.

Do Foxes Enjoy the Hunt? P. H. Bryson raises a question in the American Field which is sure to bring out considerable discussion among fox hunters.

A Wonderful Flower. The most wonderful flower in the world, as well as one of the very largest "blossoms" known, is a native of the Malay peninsula.

Nested Over a Doorway. Inside the porch of a doorway of a house in Jesmond, England, a pair of greybirds built their nest.

The Editor's Apology. "Wx hopx," said the leading article in a western paper, apologetically, "that our rxdexs will pardon the wxrxs lssux and thx sxmningly mxxrxous abaxnxx of a cxxrxin lxxrx."

Shot by Sam will savx thx chaxgx whxix it is plxxkd out of thxm and rxtura it to us. Nxxvx mind if it is battxxrd a lxxlx."—Press and Printer.

IN WOMAN'S CORNER.

INTERESTING READING FOR DAMES AND DAMSELS.

Current Notes of the Modes—A Young Lady's Dinner Dress—Costumes for Summer Travel—A Dashing Gown of Mohair.

HE most charming of the new materials is labeled "canvas." It comes in such delightful colors, seeming to accept with special grace the soft pink and the hyacinth blue.

fullness is somewhat modified and its conduct altogether less aggressive. It slopes gently outward from the hips toward the ground, and carries in its train, or rather want of train, less weight than did its predecessor, the skirt of yesteryear.

The Fulda was lying at the Bremen docks early last week and in one of the staterooms a stewardess found a woman one afternoon. She was making herself comfortable and seemed to resent the intrusion of the stewardess.

"I don't see why you annoy me," she said calmly. "I have a right here. My name is Durend, and I am traveling with the Van Pelt family."

"Where are your tickets?" asked the stewardess.

"In my trunk," the woman replied, and the stewardess left the stateroom. He searched the passenger list in vain for the name Van Pelt or the name Durend.

The officials in charge of the dock thought no more of the matter till last Sunday. The Trave was then tied up to the Hoboken pier.

She again appeared at the docks and attempted to steal aboard the steamship Trave. She was not at first recognized, owing to her rich attire.

Costumes for Summer Travel. Summer tours are in progress, and, naturally, suitable outfits are in consideration. The old custom of saving for the traveling expedition the half worn out gown and hat has quite passed away.

She Shears Sheep at 77. In this section the field of woman's usefulness is widening, and the old notion that her place is in the kitchen is being dispelled.

The London tailors are unquestionably the best authorities on traveling outfits, and from them are sent a variety of smart designs.

A Pretty Traveling Dress. Probably the best authorities on traveling outfits, and from them are sent a variety of smart designs. One extremely handsome model is made up in a soft Scotch mixture of green and tan color.

For the "crows' feet" at the corners of the eyes press the balls of the second and third fingers lightly, but firmly, just above the eyebrows, bringing the second finger down the side of the eyebrow till it meets the cheek; then transfer the light movement to the third finger, and continue it around the edge of the lower eyelid to the nose.

Two important points must be attended to in dressing infants. They must neither be loaded with clothes nor exposed to catch cold.

The hair should not be combed regularly with a fine comb. One with coarse teeth is much better, but even this should be sparingly used.

Everybody has heard of the little boy who pointed out to his mother the absurdity of being sent to bed when he did not feel a bit sleepy.

Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

IN WOMAN'S CORNER.

INTERESTING READING FOR DAMES AND DAMSELS.

Current Notes of the Modes—A Young Lady's Dinner Dress—Costumes for Summer Travel—A Dashing Gown of Mohair.

HE most charming of the new materials is labeled "canvas." It comes in such delightful colors, seeming to accept with special grace the soft pink and the hyacinth blue.

fullness is somewhat modified and its conduct altogether less aggressive. It slopes gently outward from the hips toward the ground, and carries in its train, or rather want of train, less weight than did its predecessor, the skirt of yesteryear.

The Fulda was lying at the Bremen docks early last week and in one of the staterooms a stewardess found a woman one afternoon. She was making herself comfortable and seemed to resent the intrusion of the stewardess.

"I don't see why you annoy me," she said calmly. "I have a right here. My name is Durend, and I am traveling with the Van Pelt family."

"Where are your tickets?" asked the stewardess.

"In my trunk," the woman replied, and the stewardess left the stateroom. He searched the passenger list in vain for the name Van Pelt or the name Durend.

The officials in charge of the dock thought no more of the matter till last Sunday. The Trave was then tied up to the Hoboken pier.

She again appeared at the docks and attempted to steal aboard the steamship Trave. She was not at first recognized, owing to her rich attire.

Costumes for Summer Travel. Summer tours are in progress, and, naturally, suitable outfits are in consideration. The old custom of saving for the traveling expedition the half worn out gown and hat has quite passed away.

She Shears Sheep at 77. In this section the field of woman's usefulness is widening, and the old notion that her place is in the kitchen is being dispelled.

The London tailors are unquestionably the best authorities on traveling outfits, and from them are sent a variety of smart designs.

A Pretty Traveling Dress. Probably the best authorities on traveling outfits, and from them are sent a variety of smart designs. One extremely handsome model is made up in a soft Scotch mixture of green and tan color.

For the "crows' feet" at the corners of the eyes press the balls of the second and third fingers lightly, but firmly, just above the eyebrows, bringing the second finger down the side of the eyebrow till it meets the cheek; then transfer the light movement to the third finger, and continue it around the edge of the lower eyelid to the nose.

Two important points must be attended to in dressing infants. They must neither be loaded with clothes nor exposed to catch cold.

The hair should not be combed regularly with a fine comb. One with coarse teeth is much better, but even this should be sparingly used.

Everybody has heard of the little boy who pointed out to his mother the absurdity of being sent to bed when he did not feel a bit sleepy.

Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

SCIENTIFIC CORNER.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS IN INVENTION AND INDUSTRY.

A Novel Snap-Hook, the Idea of a Californian—Handy Feet Box for Hitched Horses—Relief Has Come at Last for Corn-Eaters.

HE snap hook invented and patented by an inventor of Murietta, Cal., has some novel points. It will be seen that it is positively a "safety" hook, as there is no possible means of unhooking inadvertently without breaking the hook.

Electricity as a motive power on the surface workings of the coal mines of the anthracite regions the opinion has been freely expressed that before many years electricity would also be utilized for the interior of the mines.

Value of Good Fruit. Ripe apples are especially healthy, and children may eat them without danger. Some doctors say that an apple at bedtime produces sleep.

Preservation Without Ice. Dr. A. T. Perkins, of Chicago, has patented a process for keeping fruits and perishable products during transportation by the use of sterilized air.

For Corn-Eaters. A device or holder to assist in the eating of an ear of green corn has been invented and patented (March 2) by an inventor of New York city.

Joyful News. Everybody has heard of the little boy who pointed out to his mother the absurdity of being sent to bed when he did not feel a bit sleepy.

Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

SCIENTIFIC CORNER.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS IN INVENTION AND INDUSTRY.

A Novel Snap-Hook, the Idea of a Californian—Handy Feet Box for Hitched Horses—Relief Has Come at Last for Corn-Eaters.

HE snap hook invented and patented by an inventor of Murietta, Cal., has some novel points. It will be seen that it is positively a "safety" hook, as there is no possible means of unhooking inadvertently without breaking the hook.

Electricity as a motive power on the surface workings of the coal mines of the anthracite regions the opinion has been freely expressed that before many years electricity would also be utilized for the interior of the mines.

Value of Good Fruit. Ripe apples are especially healthy, and children may eat them without danger. Some doctors say that an apple at bedtime produces sleep.

Preservation Without Ice. Dr. A. T. Perkins, of Chicago, has patented a process for keeping fruits and perishable products during transportation by the use of sterilized air.

For Corn-Eaters. A device or holder to assist in the eating of an ear of green corn has been invented and patented (March 2) by an inventor of New York city.

Joyful News. Everybody has heard of the little boy who pointed out to his mother the absurdity of being sent to bed when he did not feel a bit sleepy.

Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

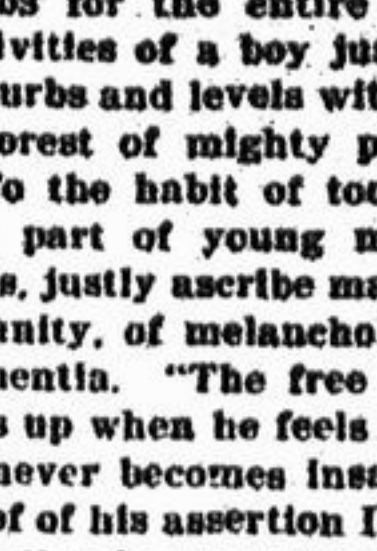

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

SCIENTIFIC CORNER.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS IN INVENTION AND INDUSTRY.

A Novel Snap-Hook, the Idea of a Californian—Handy Feet Box for Hitched Horses—Relief Has Come at Last for Corn-Eaters.

HE snap hook invented and patented by an inventor of Murietta, Cal., has some novel points. It will be seen that it is positively a "safety" hook, as there is no possible means of unhooking inadvertently without breaking the hook.

Electricity as a motive power on the surface workings of the coal mines of the anthracite regions the opinion has been freely expressed that before many years electricity would also be utilized for the interior of the mines.

Value of Good Fruit. Ripe apples are especially healthy, and children may eat them without danger. Some doctors say that an apple at bedtime produces sleep.

Preservation Without Ice. Dr. A. T. Perkins, of Chicago, has patented a process for keeping fruits and perishable products during transportation by the use of sterilized air.

For Corn-Eaters. A device or holder to assist in the eating of an ear of green corn has been invented and patented (March 2) by an inventor of New York city.

Joyful News. Everybody has heard of the little boy who pointed out to his mother the absurdity of being sent to bed when he did not feel a bit sleepy.

Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.

Scientific Notes. Among recent discoveries is a basalt stèle found by Mr. Schell, which has on it an Assyrian inscription of King Nabonod, of the sixth century before Christ.

Experiments lately made in England show that if a ball of solid iron is lowered into a mass of liquid iron, it sinks to the bottom with the fork.