THE CLAYTON-BULWER TREATY. The "Clayton-Bulwer treaty" derives name from the diplomatists who regotiated it: on the part of the Unit-States, Hon. John M. Clayton, secretary of state in President Taylors administration, and on the part of Ingland, Sir Henry Bulwer, British minister at Washington. The "treaty" to use proper diplomatic language it was a "convention," and not a treatywas concluded in 1859. Its purpose was to promote the building of an iathmian canal, to connect the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. In 1849 the United States had made a convention with Micaragua for constructing such a camal, starting at Greytown, on the Atlantic. But Greytown was occupied by British settlers, and Great Britain claimed a protectorate over the Mosquito Indians, who held the eastern coast of Nicaragua. The United States desired Great Britain to waive its claims, but as the request was deuled, the next best thing seemed to be the establishment of a joint protectorate over the proposed canal. This was done by the "Clayton-Bulwer treaty," one condition of which was that neithor sower should secure exclusive privleges in the canal, and another that neither power should occupy or exeralso dominion over any part of Central America. Since the convention was made, and especially during the last new years, the building of an isthmian canal has become increasingly important to the United States; but it is important also that the canal should be under the sole control of the United States. This could not be while the convention was in force. It has been sometimes suggested, but never formally insisted upon in diplomatic correspondence, that Great Britain has wiolated the convention by continuing to exercise dominion over British Hondures. So long as Great Britain did not take this view of the matter, awk ward questions might arisb after the canal should be constructed.

THE EXPLORING HABIT.

That royal explorer, the duke of the Abruzzi, is not, it seems, an exception to the rule that gentlemen who start wat to find the north pole have to be hunted up themselves. The history of iolar expeditions is almost invariable. The intrepid individual who fares birth to the frozen north always has to rescued. His bark is scarcely out of fight behind the headlands before another vessel is fitted out for the pursame of saving him from polar bears and similar inconveniences. The Italhas prince, who is to be hunted up by Mr. Nansen, is merely keeping up the traditions of polar exploration, Mr. Mansen will bring him home covered with glory and frostbites, and his highmess will either write a book or take the lecture platform to relate to an admiring world how he subsisted on a Mant diet of blubber and old boots for awe or three months in the interest of science. They all do it.

MMGLAND'S BOTCOTT ON PARIS.

An English paper has this to say by may of encouragement to the Paris excoltion: "If you are going to Paris est vaccinated before you start. Acsording to private letters from that city amalipox prevails in an epidemic dethis fact through the foreign newspapers or by the news agencies. Even if It be true, there would be a disposition to keep quiet about it. It will be prudent to take precautions against this, and, as far as possible, against other infections and contagions which great miscallaneous gatherings of people from every quarter of the world are apt to contain and to propagate."

RIPLING IN SOUTH AFRICA. Having arrived at Cape Town and natered the situation within twentyfour hours, Mr. Rudyard Kipling has prepared plans and specifications for he appear settlement of the entire South African difficulty. As nearly as we can judge from his cabled maniesto, Mr. Kipling favors shooting about half the population of Cape Coland handing the rest. The plan is grobably all right, but it involves a sedless waste of ammunition, says Chicago Chronicle. Why not line e traiters up and read Mr. Kipling's seems to them?
