The special election held Saturday to choose a successor to M. K. Bush, member of the village board of trustees, resigned, attracted only a few voters, owing to the fact but one ticket was in the field. Louis Klein was elected, receiving 75 votes.

The freight house at Hinsdale caught fire Monday night from a lighted lamp and came near being razed to the ground. One hundred and twenty bales of binding twine, a harvesting machine, two carloads of hay, two barrels of oil and two barrels of gasoline were burned. One end of the building was blown out by the explosion of the gasoline. The building was considerably damaged, but is not a total wreck.

Years ago Bret Harte wrote a series of stories which he called "condensed novels"—humorous tales, in which he burlesqued the style, mannerisms and peculiarities of the authors of the day. Mr. Harte has just completed, for the Saturday Evening Post, a new series of these inimitably funny literary caricatures. The first of these "condensed novels"—"The Jungle Folk"—appeared in the Saturday Evening Post of June 30th.

Rev. Irl Hicks, in his weather predictions for July, promises that the month will open stormily, and be cool until almost the 6th. During this period summer squalls will be prevalent. From the 8th to the 10th cooler weather will ensue, with another storm period about the 13th. Active thunder storms from the 12th to the 14th will be followed by warm weather, which will continue until about the 20th. During this period there will be occasional thunder gusts, but little rain. A few cool days will be followed by an extremely hot term. The high temperature will continue until about the 30th, with many threatening clouds and thunder gusts. There is slight probability of dangerous storms during July, although threatening appearances will often occur.
