 The one great feature of Buffalo Bill's Wild West, which appears at Aurora August 25th, this season, will be the reproduction, on an elaborate scale as the time and area will allow, of the famous charge up San Juan Hill. In this scene five hundred men will be used, and among them will be actual participants in the real charge. A number of Roosevelt's Rough Riders, Regular United States Cavalrymen, Volunteers of Cuban Insurgents will be prominent in this mimic representation of the charge that added another brilliant page to American history. The scenery has been painted from photographs especially taken, and the topography of the country has been closely adhered to. The reproduction is made under the direction of Nate Salisbury, Manager of the Wild West, who is a wounded veteran of the Civil War, as well as one of the best actors and stage managers in America, and as he is familiar with all requirements of such a spectacular production it is safe to believe that nothing that will add to the effectiveness of the picture will be left undone.
