LINCOLN'S BODY REMOVED.

in Formanent Tomb.

Wednesday at Springfield, Ill., for the eleventh time. The transfer was from the temporary vault, where the remains have reposed during the reconstruction of the national monument, to the marble sarcophagus inside the tomb. Here, it is predicted, the revered bones will be permitted the peace they have failed to secure through the first thirty-five years of their decay. Fate and a worshipful nation have not dealt kindly with the clay of the idolized emancipator, and since his tragic death the body has been shifted about at the whim of a devoted but exacting public. After the death in the house near Ford's theater, where the assassination occurred, the body was first moved to the White House, next to the Capitol Building, thence to the funeral car and across the states to Illinois, from the car to the receiving vault in Oak Ridge cemetery, then to the temporary vault, from which it was transferred to the sarcophagus. After the memorable attempt to steal the remains the body was taken from the sarcophagus and placed in an improvised crypt be tween the walls of the tomb, and later buried beneath a bed of cement at the base of the monument. On March 16, 1900, the body again was removed to a temporary vault, where it remained until now. The transfer of Wednesday was devoid of ceremony. Official ly Governor Yates, Alfred Bayliss tion, and State Treasurer Williamson. ment, witnessed the transfer. As favored guests were present former members of the board, members of the Lincoln Guard of Honor, organized to protect the sacred dust, and other dignitaries, including Senator Shelby M. temore, Attorney-General Hamlin,

The plan was approved by the unanimous vote of the board of overseers, and the invitation to the president to attend the commencement exercises was extended to him by the university authorities officially. The conference of the degree will take place at the meeting to be held just before the commencement. The overseers will pay no more attention to protests against their decision to honor the president. They say that too much attention has been already given to the matter and that the wish of all who have Harvard's interest at heart is to drop the affair and all discussion concerning it. It is believed that the movement in securing signatures to the petition against the decision will now be abandoned.

Left to Mitchell and Justi. The arbitration committee of the Il-Hnois Coal Operators' association and United Mine Workers of America, which held a three days' session in Chicago last week, failed to settle the dispute between the miners at Danville, Ill., and the operators as to which party shall remove what known as "dead work." Each claims the other should do the work under the state agreement. VILLAGE IS DEPOPULATED

Electro-Chemical Works at Greisbelm Germany, Are Wrecked and Burned-People Driven from Their Homes by Fames of Blasing Acids.

At least fifty-one persons were killed and 100 severely injured in the electrochemical works at Greisheim, near Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany, by an explosion at 4 p. m. Thursday. The hospitals are crowded with patients The catastrophe originated in a small fire which ignited several recentacles of pioric acid, causing a terrific explosion. The houses adjoining the factory were partly burned and partly demolished by the violence of the explosion. The flames started by the explosion were instantly communicated to the huge factory buildings. The fire spread with frightful rapidity to adjacent houses and then leaped across the river Main to Schwanheim. Shorty after the chemical factory began to burn a second explosion followed, increasing the danger to lives and property. In the room where the fire broke out were eighten cylinders, each con taining one hundredweight of smokeless powder. It was the explosion of so large a quantity of powder that caused so great a loss of life. To add to the danger there were several large reservoirs filled with benzine in another part of the factory. Fire brigades from every place in the neighborhood hurried to the scene, but owing to the dangerous nature of the disaster and the fear of a renewal of the explosions the greatest difficulty was experienced in stopping the progress of the flames. Only after five hours of strenuous effort was the conflagration to some extent controlled and the danger passed, so as to make it possible to begin the work of extricating the bodies. The government promptly dispatched troops to the scene, and ambulances, nurses and surgeons were sent by special train from Frankfort. The deadly fumes from the blazing chemicals added to the dangers of the situation and the inhabitants of the village of Greisheim were consequently ordered to leave the village. They were taken by special train to Frankfort, where they were given shelter. The army surgeons took immediate charge of the work of caring for the injured. Temporary hospitals were set up in sheds, to which the injured were brought by relays of soldiers. As soon as the first needs of the injured were cared for they were taken to Frankfort by special trains. It is feared that the number of dead will be larger than at first reported, as it will be impossible to ascertain the full effects of the disaster until the list of employes at the factory is examined.

Just outside our lines at Gibraltar, says the Daily Mail's Gibraltar correspondent, it is customary to land the live cattle from the ships and take them to the slaughterhouse. The other evening a British sentry was pacing up and down when a bull, just landed, rushed at him, doubtless attracted by the man's red coat. The sentry brought his rifle to the charge, and received the bull on the point of his bayonet. The animal bellowed with pain, retired a few paces, and like the good Spanish bull that he was charged again. The second time the bayonet entered the neck, and the bull, with a whisk of its head, unshipped the bayonet and carried it off with him. The sentry did not like to shoot, as his rifle was loaded with slugs. Both Spanish and English sentries on these posts are similarly armed, otherwise when using their rifles on smugglers much danger to the innocent public on either side might be done by stray bullets landing in the towns. The bull made for the Spanish lines, where the nimble sentries dodged him behind the boxes, and ultimately drove him off.

FROM DEATH'S DOOR.

Hillsdale, Ill., April 29th.-Much interest has been aroused here over the case of William Marks, who has been in a dying condition for several months with an apparently incurable Kidney Disease.

The leading physicians of this place had pronounced his case a hopeless one, and others from Port Byron, Geneseo, and Davenport, Ia., had attended him, and in a consultation decided that he could not live.

In desperation, his nephew inquired of Mr. L. F. Giles, a local druggist, as to a last resort. Mr. Giles suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which had just been introduced here.

The results were marvelous. Mr. Marks immediately began to improve, and within a few weeks was able to be up and about, completely cured.

His cure is the talk of the neighborhood, and is considered nothing short of a miracle.

There appears to be no doubt that this new remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills, will cure any case of Kidney Disease, for the more malignant forms, such as Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and Dropsy, yield readily to its remarkable influence. These forms of Chronic Kidney Disease have hitherto been considered incurable, and have baffled all medical skill, and yet, this new remedy has cured every single case in which it has been used, in this neighborhood. The doctors themselves are amazed at the wonderful work Dodd's Kidney Pills are accomplishing in Rock Island County.

Baron Stumm, one of Germany's most influential personages, commercially and politically, who died recently at the age of 64, was enormously wealthy, owning vast factories and fron foundries at Neunkirchen, where he was greatly loved by his work people on account of his strict justice and kindliness. On the other hand, he was bitterly hated by the socialists, who saw in him the type of capitalism. He was often called King Stumm because of his possessions and his somewhat autocratic bearing.
