Political War Between Tillman and Me

Laurin Reaches a Climax.

ators Tillman and McLaurin reached climax when both sent to Gov. Mc-

Sweeney of South Carolina their resignations as United States, senators.

Each announces that he will go before the primary for re-election. The resignations will take effect September 15.

This is the second instance in the history of the senate that two members of that body have resigned and appealed for vindication to the voters of their state. In 1881 Senators Conkling and Platt made a spectacular exit from the senate, their grievance being that President Garfield had ignored them in the matter of important federal ap pointments in New York. Neither Conkling nor Platt was vindicated

Platt returning to the senate twenty years later, when the feud had been forgotten. Senator Tillman seemed much pleased with himself after the resignation. He considered that he had gained an important advantage over

Senator McLaurin and that he risked little, while McLaurin's chances of coming out vindicated were one in hundred. "McLaurin made a bluff

Mrs. Salyer, it is stated, fired the shots inflicting the wounds, but it is added that her guests were also armed and shooting at her. Dr. Owens' wounds were dressed after he had been hauled into town from the scene and it was the intention of the parties to keep the affair secret, but his serious condition prevented this. It is not stated whether Mrs. Salyer's husband was at home. The Salver family is the most prominent in the county.

in Lake Huron.

In a storm that lashed the waters of the upper lakes the steamer Baltimore was sent to the bottom of Lake Huron, near Au Sable, Mich., Friday morning, and of her crew of fourteen only two escaped. Lashed to a heavy raft the two men were adrift on the lake under heavy seas all day Friday, and one of them was crazy when rescued. The storm was the worst of the season thus far, the strong northeasterly wind making navigation very dangerous near eastern shores. A large number of vessels were damaged teen injured in a head-on collision be- and several were wrecked, including tween two of the big motor cars on the the schooner A. Fatally injured: George C. Barry, Troy, hurt internally: Fred J. Smith, Albany, injured internally. The scene of the accident was a point about two miles out of Greenbush, on the line of the Alcany and Hudson railway. The road is a single-track line, with switches and sidings, and the two cars, bound in opposite directions, were trying to make a switch when they dashed into each other. The point where the cars met on the single track was at a sharp curve, and so fast were both running and so sudden was the collision that the motorman never had time to put on the brakes before south-bound car No. 22 had gone almost clean through north-bound car No. 17, and hung on the edge of a high bouff, with its load of shricking, maimed humanity. One motorman was pinioned up against the smashed front of the southbound car with both legs severed and killed instantly, while the other one lived but a few minutes. Fully 120 men, women, and children formed a struggling, shricking pyramid, mixed with blood, detached portions of human bodies, and the wreckage of the cars. Some of the least severely injured of the men extricated themselves, and began to pull people out of the rear ends of the two cars, and almost every one was taken out in this way, and nearly all were badly injured. The few women and children who had escaped injury and death were hysterical, and added their cries to the shrieks of the dying and mutilated. Men with broken arms and bones, dislocated joints, and bloody heads and faces tried to assist others who were more helpless. Help had been summoned from East Greenbush and vicinity, and in a little time the bruised mass of humanity and the mutilated dead were loaded on extra cars and taken to Albany. There ambulances and physicians had been summoned and the postoffice turned into a morgue and hospital. As fast as the physicians could temporarily fix up the wounded they were taken to their homes or to the hospital. With both motormen killed, it was hard to get at the real cause of the accident. but it is fairly well determined that it was caused by an attempt of the southbound car to reach a second switch, instead of waiting for the north-bound car at the first siding.

INSULAR POLICY SUSTAINED

Supreme Court's Decision Conceraing Island Possessions.

THE VOTE IS FIVE TO FOUR

The Powers of Congress Under the Constitution Defined-Manner of Collect ing Revenues in Insular Possessions in the Power of Congress. By a vote of five to four the Supreme Court of the United States Monday handed down what is undoubtedly the greatest decision ever made by that tribunal.

1. The Constitution does not follow the flag ex propria vigore-of its own

2. The United States may enter upon a colonial policy—has already entered upon it-without violation of the Constitution. 3. This nation has all the powers territory without incorporating such territory as an integral part of itself. 4. The simple act of acquisition by treaty or otherwise does not automatically bring about such incorporation; and incorporation is effected only by the will of the states acting consciously through Congress. 5. Porto Rico is not a part of the United States, but "a territory appurtenant and belonging to the United States." Tariffs established by Congress upon goods coming from or going to Porto Rico are valid and collectible. The Foraker act is constitutional. 6. Congress has full power over the territories, may regulate and dispose of them, may at its discretion extend the Constitution to them, may admit them as states, or may hold them indefinitely as territories, colonies or dependencies.

7. Porto Rico is not a "foreign country" and therefore the Dingley law, which levies duties upon goods imported "from foreign countries," does not apply to Porto Rico. Nor yet is "Porto Rico a part of the United States." is a domestic territory, over which Congress has "unrestricted control."

The De Lima case involved the pow-

States from Porto Rico after the ratification of the treaty of Paris and before the passage of the Porto Rico act. The court said the government's conritory. The entire case turned upon the position was not well taken; that which had been collected must be recase followed the history of the dealings of the United States with Porto Rico a step farther. That case dealt with the legality of the exaction of duties on goods imported from Porto Rico into New York after the passage of the Foraker act providing for a duty upon goods shipped from the United States into Porto Rico, and also on those shipped from Porto Rico to the United States. In this case the court held that such exaction was legal and constitutional. The point of the two opinions considered collectively is that Porto Rico was never, after the acquisition of that island, foreign territory; that until Congress acted upon the question no duty could be collected but that as soon as Congress outlined a method of controlling the Island's revenues that action became binding. In other words, that Congress has power under the Constitution to prescribe the manner of collecting the revenues of the country's insular possessions. and has the right to lay a duty or goods imported into our insular possessions from the United States or ex ported from them into the United States. It holds, in brief, that for taxation purposes they are not a part of the United States to the extent that goods shipped between their ports and the United States are entitled to the same treatment as though they were shipped between New York and New Orleans.

Give Dector a Thrashing. Dr. Adolph Goodman, osteopath, living in Kansas City, Mo., was horsewhipped by his father-in-law, J. K. Beckham, and his brother-in-law, J. K. Beckham, Jr. J. K. Two London crooks, Grainger and Rice, engineered a slick swindle recently. They forged a check for $1,000 and signed it with the name of a man who had a big balance in his band. Then Grainger "made up" to resemble the person whose name was being used and, waiting until the man had gone out to luncheon, stepped into his office and into the telephone box. At the same minute Rice appeared at the bank and presented the check. He said he was a new clerk of the man whose name was on the check, but the cashier refused to give the money to him until he was identified. Rice said that his employer wanted the money right away and suggested that he be called up by telephone at his office. This was done and Grainger, at the other end, answered the telephone bell and said, of course, that the check was all right and "please hurry and give the man the money." Then he left the office without it being discovered that he was not the proprietor of the place and, meeting Rice, the two divided the money and made off.
