Was Walking East on Track at Lis When Struck by Train Running Sixty Miles an Hour-Instantly Killed.

Confused by the noise of a passing freight train, Whitney Willard, father of George Willard, who lives on the W. H. Mertz farm near Lisle, was struck and instantly killed by the east bound Denver hmited early Thursday morning at the Lisle curve. The train was a heavy one of rine coaches, drawn by the mammoth engine No. 1592, and was running at a speed of sixty miles an hour when the accident occurred. The pilot struck his left leg breaking the bones below the knée, and he was almost decapitated, from his head striking some part of the front of the en gine, The body was thrown quite distance to the side of the track so the train did not pass over it.

Mr. Willard had spent Wednesday night at Naperville and had come start:d on the north tack to walk to his son's farm. Just past the Lisle the south track, and the noise of the freight drowned the sound of the limited coming behind him. Going at the awful speed the limited swung around the curve and brought the doomed man in sight of the engineer, who applied the air brakes, and blew the whistle, but failed to stop the train in time to avert the fatality. Mr. Whitney is 81 years old and somewhat deaf and evidently did not hear the limited.

The body was brought to Downers Grove and laid on a stretcher in the baggage room at the depot, awaiting identification. G. R. Willard a nephew, and the dead man's son, George, identifled the remains. Coroner Matter came over from Wheaton and held an inquest at four o'clock Thursday afternoon. The jury's verdict was that "his death resulted from being struck by Burlington train No. 12, east bound, while walking on the track."

quest gave some light on the accident. He said as he approached the curve he met the west bound freight and that the engineer of that train signaled him to look out for a man on the track, and that he saw Willard just ahead as his train rounded the curve. According to his testimony he immediately apgoing at such a terrific speed he could not stop it in time. He failed to rethe train. Just before the engine he looked up in a bewildered manner removed to Davis' undertaking rooms and prepared for burial. The funeral was held at the home of his son, George Willard, Friday and the remains taken to Fonda, Iowa, for interment.
