Cross-Exmaination of the Admiral the Next Step.

COURT WILL TAKE A HAND.

Questioning by Attorney Rayner and the Judge Advocate May Occupy Two Days-Rayner Will Ask a Complete Vindication of Schley.

Washington dispatch: The next step in the programme of the Schley court of inquiry is to place the "applicant" under examination by Mr. Rayner in order to bring out more strongly the points which he had made and to make clear the ones which he left obscure. In the cross-examination of Schley centers the greatest interest. The judge advocate has prepared a long list of questions which he means to ask the witness, and the court has in store many more on which it needs enlightenment. It was noted that during Schley's recountal of the Santiago campaign, which he gave during the two days he was on the stand, Admiral Benham wrote on slips of paper questions which the court will ask when the cross-examination has been concluded. It is estimated that it will require fully two days to complete the cross-examination. Then will follow these questions by the court, and probably another day will be consumed in redirect examination. finished, witnesses will be called in rebuttal. By these the navy department will endeavor to show that Schley had received direct intimation that the Spanish squadron was in Santlago before he began his retrograde movement. This retrograde movement, the failure to destroy the Colon and the Hodgson correspondence now seem to be the points on which the navy department mostly relies to prove its case.

No Criticism of "Loop."

As to the Brooklyn's "loop," that spectacular feature of the Santiago battle and the one which has been more widely discussed than any one of the ten precepts, it is pointed out by navy officers directly concerned in this investigation that whatever individual officers may have said, the department itself has never made any criticism of Schley for that maneuver. searching for Gaines. The execution Secretary Long, in his letter, made no | followed. mention of it, and it is now known that he had early information that Cook and not Schley had given the order-that Cook had regarded it as a good tactical move and that officers like Clark of the Oregon had approved it as such. It is claimed by the Admiral's friends here that Schley in his narrative of events very nearly demolished or satisfactorily explained the mass of testimony which had piled up against him concerning the other counts. In his examination of the witness Mr. Rayner hopes similarly to dispose of all the rest, and in his summing up will endeavor to show cause why his client should receive full vindication at the hands of the court, as he has already received it from the · Admiral Dewey and his colleagues retired for consultation, and, returning announced that they wanted no questions asked concerning Schley's control of the fleet after the date when he surrendered command of the squad-

Judge Advocate Lemly overlooked no opportunity to substantiate the charges made in the department precept. He asked a multitude of questions calculated to show that Schley was guilty of various misdemeanors, and delved into trivial details until the faces of the admirals of the court showed they were growing impatient. Lemly did his best to elicit information unfavorable to Schlev, but made no effort to develop other lines of evidence. Doubtless the judge advocate will leave it to Schley's counsel to bring out that part of the testimony.
