THE 82ND VOLUNTEER INFANTRY

Communicated.
The surviving members of the 82nd Ill. Vol. Inf. with their families, numbering about seventy-five persons assembled at the headquarters of the organization, 401 N. Clark street, on Sunday evening, Oct. 20th, to celebrate the 39th anniversary of the mustering in of the regiment into the U. S. service, and to further commemorate that historic event, the Ladies' Aid society, an organization composed of the wives and daughters of the veterans, agreeably surprised the old soldiers by presenting to them a handsome silk banner. The presentation speech being made by Mrs. Wieland and was appropriately responded to on behalf of the veterans by President Fred Propper. The unexpected gift aroused the veterans to old time enthusiasm. Resolutions of thanks were unanimously passed with hearty cheers for the donors and the flag. Recitations were rendered by Captain Frank Kirchner and Master and Miss Kirchner. Patriotic songs were sung, after which all those present repaired to an elaborate banquet, where addresses were made by different members of the organization.

The regiment was organized at Camp Butler, Springfield, Ill., on Sept. 26, 1862, and mustered into the U. S. service at the same place on Oct. 23, 1862. On Nov. 3rd following, the 82nd left Camp Butler 1,000 strong, under orders to join the army of the Potomac. It arrived at Arlington Heights, Va., Nov. 9, 1862 and was assigned to the first brigade, third division, 11th army corps on Dec. 11th, '62 at Stafford court house, Va. On April 27, '63 general movement against Fredericksburg was commenced and on May 3, of the same year it took part in the battle of Chancellorsville losing 156 of its brave men, killed or wounded including several officers. The regiment returned to Stafford court house and remained in camp until June 12, where it attained much needed rest, when it entered upon the pursuit of the enemy at Gettysburg, participating in the great battle there, losing 131 men killed and wounded. The regiment made a most gallant charge on the enemy's pits in this struggle, capturing more prisoners than the number of the men the regiment had in the battle. Col. Solomon had in this battle two horses shot under him, and Generals Howard and Schurz complimented it especially for its bravery. The regiment then joined in the pursuit of Lee's army through Virginia, and on Sept. 25, 1863, it marched to Manassas Junction, enroute for Tennessee, arriving at Russell's Gap, a gorge in Raccoon mountain, which it held and defended while Hooker's forces passed through the Gap into Lookout valley. On the night of Oct. 22, 1863, the 82nd had an engagement with Lee's division of Longstreet's corps and afterwards joined the main army in Lookout valley. On Nov. 22nd it joined Grant's forces at Chattanooga, and the next day participated in the attack on the enemy at Orchard Knob, and on this 23 it also took part in the attack on Missionary Ridge and the following day joined in the pursuit of Bragg's defeated army. It then marched to Cleveland and Charleston, Tenn., from whence it marched with the 11th army corps to the relief of Gen. Burnside at Knoxville who was besieged by the enemy. When his army was rescued the regiment returned to Whiteside Station, Tenn., in January 1864. The regiment suffered terribly on this long march from cold, hunger and other privations. During the winter of 1864 Gen. Sherman reorganized the army for the Atlanta campaign and the 82nd was assigned to 8th brigade, 1st division, 20th army corps, army of the Cumberland, which it joined on May 7, '64, at Triune, Ga. It then marched by way of Snake Creek Gap to Resaca, arriving there on the 13th, and on the following day the enemy attacked the left flank driving back the line of battle, leaving the famous Indiana battery at the mercy of the enemy. Just then a cheer was heard and the 82nd on a double-quick marched with fixed bayonets, charged across the field driving back the enemy and saving the battery and the left of the army from disaster. Every man of the regiment won the highest praise for gallantry. On May 25 the 82nd with the 1st division was leading Hooker's column, when it became engaged with the enemy after crossing Pumpkin Vine creek near Dalton. The 1st division was brought into action and for some time was exposed to the whole confederate force, but gained and held the advanced ground above the enemy's main line at New Hope church until reinforcements arrived. Gen. Thomas publicly complimented the men of their bravery. The 82nd in this engagement lost 11 killed and 69 wounded out of a total of 245 men present. On June 15 it participated in the assault on the enemy's line near Pine mountain losing 5 men killed and on June 17 it lost one killed and three wounded near Noses creek. On July 20 it took part in the battle of Peach Tree creek, each man firing from 140 to 180 rounds of ammunition. It then took part in the siege of Atlanta which lasted until Sept. 2, when it entered and occupied the city. The 82nd then became a part of the army of Georgia and on Nov. 15 moved from Atlanta and took part in the famous march to the sea, and after the fall of Savannah on Jan. 20, 1865, it entered upon the great march and campaign through the Carolina. In the engagement on March 16 at Averysboro, N. C., it lost 15 men killed and wounded and again on the 19 it sustained a loss of 25 men. This being the last battle of the war in which the regiment participated. On April 20, after the surrender of Johnson and his army, the regiment entered upon their homeward march, having covered 2500 miles and lost a total of 418 men killed and wounded and after taking part in the grand review at Washington on May 24, it was mustered out of service on June 9th and on the 16th arrived at its home in Chicago. The regiment returned with 900 men and on its arrival at the depot was greeted by crowds of friends and escorted to the Turner hall where a banquet was given in its honor. On the 19th it was tendered a public reception at the great Sanitary fair, returning thereafter to Camp Douglas where on July 1, 1865 it was finally disbanded. The officers of the present regimental organization are, Fred Propper, president; M. E. Stanger, vice president; Alex. Henschel, secretary; Fred Kappeleman, financial secretary; Charles Bock, treasurer.
