By an oversight on the part of seemingly everybody who attended the village caucus, the name of Geo. B. Heartt was placed before the caucus as a candidate for the position of south side trustee and he was unanimously chosen. Later it developed that Mr. Heartt was not eligible for the position owing to the fact that he has not been a resident of the village for the requisite period of time. This necessitated the dropping of his name from the citizens' caucus ticket, and voters were compelled to write the names of their choice for this office on election day, Tuesday.
