

THE MASSACHUSETTS STATUE UNVEILED AT CLEVELAND

A beautiful bronze statue was unveiled to the memory of Louis Kossuth at Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 23. Thousands of visitors witnessed the unveiling.

The statue is the work of Andras Tota, a Hungarian sculptor. It was presented to the city of Cleveland by Hungarian societies.

Why Teeth Decay. According to a report issued by the British Medical Association, one of the chief causes of the prevalent decay of teeth is that the average dental apparatus does not do enough work. It is said that cooking has come to such a condition of refinement that chewing is becoming one of the lost arts and that the teeth are simply waiting away from lack of exercise.

NATIONAL GUARD TRIES WAR GAME

Kansas and Colorado Militiamen Take a Hand at Fort Riley.

AMATEURS HAVE MUCH TO LEARN

State Troops Expose Themselves to the Fire of the Regulars, Making a Sorry Showing on the Umpire's Card—Officers Receive Lessons.

Fort Riley, Kan., dispatch: Militiamen tried the war game against American regulars and their efforts afforded clinching proof of the great need of a monster school of annual instruction, which official Washington has planned the Fort Riley maneuvers to develop into.

The exercises were in the nature of instructions to the First and Second Kansas regiments, and a Colorado battalion, as to the formation of outposts, and the resistance of an enemy's attack. For the first time the fight turned into a sham battle.

Militia Makes Poor Showing. How the men from the Sunflower state went about this tactical problem was shown when twelve men of the First Kansas, standing in the open at the base of a line of foot hills, without a hint of color near, resolutely kept banging away on their rifles, trying to hold off thirteen regulars of the army of the brown, who constructively represented 450 men in actual war.

The militia pickets would have been picked off like prairie chickens by the rifles, which kept spanking fusillades at them from the cover afforded by the crest of the hills.

Use Old Rifles. That the militiamen were in action was told plainly by the old Springfield rifles, with which they are equipped. These gushed showers of smoke and their reports give the observer the impression that fourteen field batteries are hard at work, seeking to beat each other in the quantity of shrapnel discharged.

Observing the maneuvers with Maj. Gen. Bates and his staff were Assistant Secretary of War Sanger and Acting Adj. Gen. Carter. They will return to Washington with information bearing on the needs of a monster maneuver camp, where the art of war may be taught practically to the national guard on the country each year. That congress will act to this end is held to be a certainty.

Officers Go to School. It was "school day" from start to finish. When the major general, brigadiers and colonels, representing the national guard of twenty-six states, were not noting the errors of the militiamen from the crests surrounding hills, they were listening to lectures as to how to feed an army in the field, and how to throw up intrenchments in the shortest space of time with anything from a pick and shovel to a mess pan and a tin cup.

The maneuvers brought Fort Riley's big reservation into the grip of three giant hands, for this was the formation in which three engagements were fought in as many sections of the 20,000-acre tract.

Men Are Too Anxious. It was rattle and boom all along the lines, the sentinels and pickets being slowly driven in. Umpires were not dead, else the entire armies of the blues might figure as having been blown off the earth.

At times the pickets would not drive in. This brought the usual comment from the national guard officers, who were critical observers. "We always have the same trouble," said one major general from an eastern state. "They want a sham battle and they want to go in and club the opposing side with their guns, even if it has been arranged that they are to retreat after firing so many rounds. The American militiaman wants everything he goes after, and he will get it, but from now on he should be taught the real art of war."

DECOMPOSED BODY ON PLAINS

Victim of Stockmen's Quarrel Found in New York Country.

Butte, special: Advice tell of another murder in the New York country in Wyoming as a result of the great sheep raid which took place recently. Deadly enmity exists between the cattle and sheep men over grazing rights on the range, and this is the third murder in a month. The victim's decomposed body was found in the brush and his identity could not be established.

FUNSTON DECLINES TO SPEAK

Still Suffers From "Sore Throat" Contracted Six Months Ago.

Ottawa, Kan., dispatch: Brig. Gen. Funston, commander of the department of Colorado, was the guest of honor at the officers' reunion here. When introduced to a large crowd in the Chautauque tabernacle Gen. Funston said: "I do not appear before you to make a speech. I made a speech, you know, in Denver six months ago and have had a sore throat ever since."

Cattle Duties Unchanged. Berlin cable: The tariff committee of the Reichstag maintained its previous decision regarding minimum duties on cattle.

SAVE BACK THE MARBLER.

Characteristic Anecdote Told of Archbishop John H. Farley.

The Right Rev. John H. Farley, the recently appointed archbishop of the diocese of New York, began life just as any other boy would. He was devoted to all outdoor exercises, and excelled in most of them, though his forte, in those youthful days, was probably marbles. It is not on record that he ever was beaten.

One day he returned home with his clothing torn and his face spattered with the blood that still dripped mournfully from his diminutive nose. It transpired that his opponent in a game of marbles, angry at his own losses, and at John's easy good humor, had picked a fight with him—and had been thrashed. The unusual part of the story is what follows.

When, at the end of a ten-minute mix-up, John Farley found himself on top of the heap he disentangled himself, and emptying his pockets of his winnings, said: "These little things made you fight. Take 'em. Perhaps they'll heal your wounds."

A Supervisor's Story. Lockport, N. Y., Oct. 6th.—Mr. George P. Penfold, Supervisor for the first ward of the city of Lockport, has written the following letter for publication to the newspapers: "It gives me great pleasure to recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills as a cure for kidney trouble.

"My kidneys troubled me more or less for years and treatment by local physicians only gave me partial and temporary relief.

"An old friend, knowing my trouble, advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills telling me at the same time how much they had helped him.

"I used altogether six boxes and found a permanent cure.

"This was two years ago and I have not since been troubled in any way with pains in the back or any of the many other distressing difficulties arising from diseased kidneys."

Where the Fault Was. When Mayor Low was at Great Barrington last autumn, resting from the fatigue of a strenuous political life, he enjoyed several drives about the Berkshire country, says the New York Times. On one of these he observed a milestone indicating the distance to Stockbridge as four miles, when he knew they were within a much shorter radius of that town. Said Mr. Low to the driver:

"What's the matter with that milestone?" "Oh!" was the keen response promptly given. "The milestone's all right, only it's in the wrong place!"

Rudyard Kipling's story in Everybody's, "The Comprehension of Private Copper," expresses the attitude of certain expatriated Britishers settled in the Cape country who became Boer sympathizers because of English neglect of their interest. The episode is highly dramatic, and told in Kipling's best vein.

A GREAT SUFFERER FROM RHEUMATISM.

Cured by St. Jacobs Oil.

Mr. E. G. Moore, of 7 Phillips Street, Kingsland: "I was a great sufferer from Rheumatism for many years, during which time I tried many remedies, from which I received but very little relief. Being advised to use St. Jacobs Oil, I did so, and am happy to say that after a few applications I felt great relief, and continuing its use I can now say I am perfectly well. St. Jacobs Oil is, in my opinion, a thing which should be in every household."

What a blessing, and what hours of suffering, pain and misery would have been saved had Mr. Moore adopted the wiser course and used St. Jacobs Oil at first, instead of wasting time and money on worthless embrocations and nostrums with which, unfortunately, the market is flooded. The public should not lose sight of the fact that St. Jacobs Oil has conquered pain for more than fifty years, and it isn't going to stop doing the same thing now or at any future time.—Fifty years' record of pain conquering is a record to inspire confidence.
