A LOVE STORY BY AMELIA E. BARR

A short time after Cornelia came home, Doctor Moran returned from his professional visits. Nature had left the impress of her nobility on his finely formed forehead; nothing but truth and kindness looked from his candid eyes. On entering the room, he drew his wife close to his heart and kissed her affectionately.

"When Madame Hyde was Katherine Van Heemskirk, and younger than you are, she had two lovers; one, Capt. Dick Hyde, and the other a young man called Nell Semple; and they fought a duel about her, and nearly cut each other to pieces."

"Cornelia shall not have anything to do with him." "Very good. I must look after that young fellow." But he said the words without much care, and Mrs. Moran was not satisfied.

"You have given me no opportunity, and, as you know all, why should I say any more about it?" "Cornelia, my dear companion, let us be honest, if we do for it. And you may as well tell me of your little coquetries with George Hyde, for I shall be sure to find them out. Now I am going home; for I must look after the tea table. But you will not be sorry, for it will leave you free to think of—" him afar off, and was at the door to give him a welcome. "Joris, my dear one, we were talking of you!" she cried, as he leaped from the saddle to her arms. "So glad are we! Come in quickly! Well, are you? Quite well. Now, then, I am happy. Happy as can be! Look now, Richard!" she called, as she flung the door open, and entered with the handsome, smiling youth at her side.

In his way the father was just as much pleased. "Kate, my dear heart," he cried, "let us have something to eat. The boy will be hungry as a hunter after his ride. And George, what brings you home? We were just telling each other—your mother and I—that you were in the height of the city's follies."

"Cornelia, shall I tell you why you are working so close to the window this afternoon?" "You are going to say something I would rather not hear, Arenta."

Entry by Nomination in Navy. He states that the proposed mode of entry by nomination is a relic of admiralty patronage, which the board is unwilling to relinquish; but, whether the admirals like it or not, it must soon go the way of all such antiquated privileges.

Lee answered angrily: "I understand this move. It is one of that fellow Folk's. He is always making an ass of himself. I wish you would apologize to Mr. Hughes, your prosecuting attorney, for the trouble I have caused him, and explain to him that if he wants me to testify in any case pending here I will be prompt to obey his summons."

FIERCE BATTLE WITH BANDITS

James McKinney Is Shot to Death in a Josshouse at Bakersfield.

DEPUTY SHERIFF IS A VICTIM

Desperado and Two Companions Put Up a Desperate Fight Before the Leader is Killed and His Allies Taken Captive.

Bakersfield, Cal., dispatch: James McKinney, the bandit and murderer, was shot and killed in a Chinese joss-house here, after a desperate battle, in which Deputy Sheriff Tibbets was killed and Constable Packard was fatally shot.

Stand Off Fought. McKinney, up to the moment he fell dead with a bullet through his neck, lived up to his reputation as a desperate fighter and a deadly man with the sawed-off shotgun, his favorite weapon.

Stand Off Fought. McKinney and two others stood off the posse until McKinney was killed, and even then it was with difficulty the other two were dislodged. One came out when the fire department was called out and held ready to check the spread of the fire it was intended to start under the house. The other man refused to give up until the fire actually was started and the desperado almost suffocated.

Stays a Deputy. Sheriffs Kelly of Kern county, Colings of Tulare county, and Lovin of Arizona, with Deputies Will and Burt Tibbitts, Gus Tower and City Marshal Packard, surrounded McKinney in a Chinese josshouse.

Will Tibbitts and Packard approached McKinney in the house and ordered him to surrender. McKinney answered by shooting. Will Tibbitts was shot through the stomach and died shortly after; Packard was shot through the neck and shoulders and dangerously wounded. Burt Tibbitts, a brother of the dead deputy sheriff, shot McKinney through the mouth and neck, killing him.

Turn House into Fort. McKinney had been in Bakersfield two days, and was harbored by friends. The house was a regular fort. In the place with McKinney was Hul Hulse and another desperado. McKinney had a sawed-off shotgun in his hand, while Hulse used a pistol.

Hulse would not obey the order to come out of the barricaded house until the fire department was ordered to the scene. He was taken to the county jail. An immense mob surrounded the jail and tried to take him from the officers. The other accomplice of McKinney staid in the house until it was set on fire and he was smacked out.
