OF CORN HUSES AND CARPET.

I'mo Grinding Wheels t'sed for Poltohing the Teeth of the Combs. There are many kinds of grinding wheels, but, perhaps, as curious as any is the cornbusk wheel, which is used for grinding comba.

The teeth of some sorts of combs, after they have been cut, still need to be be rounded on the edges and smoothed and finished all around, which could not be done on a solid, flat-faced wheel, says the New York Sun. For this there is required a wheel of some materia. teeth and also in between them. That corn-husk wheel serves this purpose

For the making of such a wheel dried forn husks are need. They are laid to-dozen or so, the butts all at one end and the points at the other.

The corn-busk grinding wheel is 20 inches in dismeter, made up of such South Building ittle bundles of corn husks placed with North Building their butts against and secured to the spindle on which the wheel is to turn. the husks radiating from it all around. When a sufficient number of bundles of husks to form the wheel have thus been placed against the spindle, the wheel is compressed, to make it not solid but compact and give it the width of face required,

The wheel built up in this way of corn busks is mounted and run by power. The workman, using water and after another holds the combs against the wheel. The life of a corn-busk

Another interesting wheel to be seen in the shop where they finish combs is polishing wheel of carpet covered with mustin. This wheel has a smooth and, when in use, flat rim, which, however, will yield anywhere under pressure, and so when a comb is held against it, this wheel adapts strell readily to all the comb's rounded noided surfaces, and thus can be made to polish it perfectly everywhere.

and fow the feed. A good lawn may be made either by laying sod or growing seed. If turf He set out with young artists, Will is used, the lawn is sometimes ready for use in less time than when seed is used, but practically the difference is very alight. Fewer lawns are made from turf every year. The turf or soil is nearly always obtained from a nearby field. It abounds in course grasses and pernicious weeds. The former may be got rid of after considerable trouble, but the latter rarely ever. Sod laid lawns are nearly always uneven, seamy and varied in color and texture. Their cost, too, is much in excess of seeding the lawn down.

A lawn produced from a mixture of good, new, recleaned seeds of the finer grasses and clovers is superior in quality and texture to the best sod obtainable. To obtain the best results from sowing, the ground should be carefully dug over-not too deep, six or eight inches will be enough and nicely leveled off; then sow on broadcast a good fertilizer, 600 pounds to the acre, or about ten pounds to every 15 by 15 square feet. Rake this in and roll it or flatten it with the back of a spade; then sow seventy pounds of some good lawn seed to the acre, or one pound to every 15 by 15 feet. Sow half this quantity walking one way and half walking at right angles to it, so as to get even distribution. Do not sow in windy weather, and be sure to rake the seed in, and after sowing roll it well or beat it flat with the spade.

Those seeds that are deeply buried will not germinate, and those that are exposed will be searched by the min, form or mashed away or taken by smomer it is better to mix with the
