At a distance of some fifty miles outh of the arctic circle 2,980,000 scree of land will be opened for settlement in Alaska on Sept. 80, by a recent order of the secretary of the interior. This great tract has been held in reserve for a national forest around Norton bay, but the project was abandoned, so many were the demands for entry on land which had been found more suitable for settlement, says the New York Tribune. Agriculture is proceeding hand hand with the efforts of government experiment stations, which are constantly determining what will grow which heretofore has been exotic to the soil. So far, all the hardler vegetables have been made to thrive, and in the large valleys of the interior experiments are being made, with every prospect of success, to grow hay, grain and stock feed capable of maintaining work animals. The great valley along the Busitna river in central Alaska, extending north from Cook's inlet and Resurrection bay, it is declared, has a mild climate all the year, owing to the warm currents of the ocean, and will grow almost anything that is raised in temperate sones. Most important to Alaska has been the improvement of the transportation facilities, both on steamship and railway lines. In the Susitna valley the Alaska Central railway last year had forty-seven and a half miles of standard gauge track in operation north from Seward and its roadbed in excellent shape. The series of tunnels and heavy grade work for the next six and a half miles were 90 per cent completed last year and are now about to be opened. The seven tunnels in this section are 3,800 feet long and with their completion trains will have fifty-four miles of track. The Evangelistic meetings at the Evangelical church are growing in erest and attendance. The services of the past week have been very successful. On Sunday morning the pas tor will preach from the text, "What Think Ye of the Christ?" At three p. m, there will be a children's meeting.

WHO ARE YOUSE, ANYHOW!"

Another Case in Which a Gentle Answer Accomplished Much.

Toward the northern end of the long, narrow island over which New York's piles of brick and stone spread, stands a fine old colonial mansion. Before it one day last summer stood a number of children from the East Side, listening eagerly to a sweet-faced woman.

Two rough-looking boys, not of the party, presently appeared at the edge of the group. They were dirty, ragged, and by no means prepossessing of coun-

"Who are youse, anyhow?" The barsh demand, proceeding from one of the new arrivals, interjected itself with startling effect into a pause in the talk. The children turned hastily, and the speaker's cheeks reddened, but she checked herself. Then, leaving her talk momentarily, she replied with the utmost courtesy to the rude challenge, quite as if some one had asked her to have another cup of tea.

"I'm a nature-teacher from one of the vacation schools downtown," she said, pleasantly, "and these are my pupils. We're just been visiting Fort Washington Park, to study the trees, and now we're looking at this delightful old Morris House, where General Washington once stopped--"

Here Miss R. returned to her theme, paying no further heed to the boys, although leaving them to listen with the others, if they liked.

"My work accustoms me to rough manners," said Miss R., relating the incident, "but there's something peculiarly irritating in that slangy challenge to one's identity. I very nearly rebuked the boys, for an example, as we try to teach politeness as well as nature

"But I'm learning some things mymelf-in particular, that if one refuses to take offense, the offense, even when purposely offered, seems to get lost. And I'm finding this discovery of mine that it takes two to make an offense of the greatest use in dealing with children whose ways are anything but gentle at first."

Ten days later Miss R. looked up from her desk to find the two boys before her, their heavy faces lighting up marvelous's at sight of her. For they had -ramped for days, from one East Side vacation school to another. to find the sweet-faced woman who had so courteously answered their question, and at her feet they sat until the summer session closed, learning whatever she wished to teach them.

"You see," concluded Miss R., "that question was really put in good faith, to ascertain who we were and what we were doing. This was a case where no offense was offered, though you wouldn't have guessed it. And seeing the change in these boys, I'm truly thankful that I stopped to explain who 'youse' might be, 'anyhow' !"-Youth's
