 THE "LONG FELLOWS"

The standard of height for West Point cadets has been raised one inch. At present the minimum number of inches demanded is sixty-four for candidate of seventeen, sixty-five for one of eighteen and over. That soldiership is not a matter of measurement is shown in the case of General Sherl dan, whose height, five feet four inches and a balf, would under the present conditions barely admit him to the army. A PRETTY FASHION.

All the first-class flowers for trimming hats come from gay Paris. Those of inferior grade are made in Germany, but the French artists have raised the standards of hat designing so high that now the man or woman who creates perfect flowers can make REWARE OF OINTMENTS FOR CA very large sums of money in supplying the milliners. The flower maker sits down with the flower that is to be copied, and the bits of delicate silk and satin and velvet with which to make the reproduction. Some of the work is very difficult, requiring the greatest possible delicacy of touch and attention to detail, for every tiny petal must be cut and curved separately and fastened to the completed heart of the flower. When the perfect rose or orchid is finished it is passed on to the workers to be copied in great numbers. They all have to be done by hand, but there must always be a genuine artist to fashion the first one. since not only skill but judgment and taste must go to the shading and shaping of every bloom. One woman gets 25 francs for every rose she makesnetting $60 a dozen; and these are the wholesale figures!

The perfuming of the flowers used on bats is a fashion which has had sporadic resurrection; it is far too pretty a fad to ever die out utterly. Of course, the woman who affects an individual scent, unvaryingly by day the custom, for no power would inplenty of other fragrance lovers who are charmed by the possibility of having fresh, scented flowers in their toques and picture hats. There is an adorable little shop in Paris, where the smart Frenchwomen go once or twice a week to have their artificial dowers rescented. Madame la l'erfumcuse has a row of big glass bottles holding flower extracts especially distilled. She measures out the different scents into atomizers and Monsieur le with the appropriate essences. Then miladi goes out with a real garland sweetness lingering about her garland of roses or cluster of white carnations.

Protection in Old Hats.

There is one business in New York that is always looking up-that is the old hat trade. The second-hand man who travels around town calling out that he will pay cash for "ole hats" says he stands ready to buy a carload of the discarded sky pieces. Strange to say, the demand does not come alone from the man who cannot afford new lid, but from single and widows who live alone. "They buy the hats and hang a couple on the hallracks," said the old hat dealer. "Then, when a beggar or tramp gets too rambunctious at the door, they turn and say: 'George is home. There is his hat. George! oh, George Will you come down here and turn this rascal away? Then the tramp sneaks, thinking there's a man in the Restaurant proprietors, when they open up new stands, generally lay in 25 or 30 hats. They hang them in the lobby to make believe business

The Glove.

The origin of gloves can be traced to the farthest antiquity. The English scholar Dawkins discovered on a bone dating from the prehistoric cave period a design which he claims is the picture of a glove. On the monuments of the Pharaohs in Egypt there are represented among the tributes paid by the subjected peoples gloves of the shape of the long suede worn by modern women. The Greek poet Homer also speaks of the glove that old Laurten used when doing his garden work, and, though by this a crude mitten may be meant, there can be no doubt that the ancient Greek also knew the fingered glove.

The glove was of practical use at meals, when spoon and fork were yet unknown. About A. D. 1000 the sfik glove began to compete with the leather, and served specialy as a distinguishing mark of princes and church dignitaries. Later on the presentation a glove became the symbol of feoffment, while its being thrown before the feet of an adversary was interpreted as announcing a feud.

The gloves of noblewomen were adorped with embroidery and jewels, and sprinkled with odorous powders, so that in kissing a woman's hand the nose, too, had its share in the pleasure. But these perfumed gloves were also a means for poisoning. It is said of Catharine de Medici that she poisoned Joanna of Navarre, the mother of Henry IV., in this manner. There are many historical anecdotes told of Queen Elizabeth in which the glove plays an important part.
