Yet it is stated on good statistical authority that within a hundred miles of New York City, where there is a very large poverty-stricken newspapers, song and discussion. population, there are hundreds of abandoned farms with thousands of acres of idle land. Not only is this true, but within the territory named there are allowed to go to waste each year thousands of bushels of apples. den stuff and other produce, much of it being left to rot on ground. Something like this be said of every city where unemployed people are found in large numbers. If all the unemployed people who could get work in the cities, if they wanted it, were earning wages, and if all who cannot find employment in the cities would seek it in the country, there would be a decided decrease in poverty, not only in a hard times period but at all periods. The marvelous possibilities of the millions of acres of vacant land in this country are only beginning to be realized. Intensive farming is making land wonderfully productive to all who will bring intelligence and energy to bear upon it. The world never yet had too much to est

Those who think that invention approaching its limits would do well to consider the fact stated by M. Abraham, an authority on this subject, that the best telephone does not transmit to the ear more than one one-thousandth of the energy that it receives from the line. Although there may be cases in which one could wish that the telephone would transmit less rather than more, yet, seriously, it is a challenge to inventors, as well as an in dictment of human inefficiency, when an instrument of such universal utili ty is allowed to remain so prodigal.

The immense advances recently made in the power and speed of transatiantic steamships have not yet, in the opinion of J. J. O'Neill, a Scotch engineer, been carried to the limit. Addressing the Institution of Engineers and Shipbuilders in Scotland, Mr. O'Nelli sald that the lengths of the present liners warrant the belief that greater power can be obtained with the same dimensions, the present speeds with shorter 10 :46 pm | 11 :40 pm | lengths. Investigation shows that the variations of form involve relatively small gains, and Mr. O'Netll thinks that if the same attention had been devoted to the development of the screw propeller that has been given to the form of vesseels greater advantages would have been secured.

> Prof. Joel Stebbins and Prof. F. C. Brown have recently constructed small selentum cell, which, when placed in the focus of a twelve-inch refracting telescope, causes measurable deflections of the needle of a galvanometer in response to the impact of light waves from individual stars. The planet Mars gave a deflection of nine millimeters, the star Aldebaran a deflection of 8.4 millimeters, and even a fourth magnitude star, Gamma Arietis, caused a visthis deflection. It is hoped that by the use of a specially sensitive galvanometer this method may be greatly improved, and that if certain disturbing dignantly. influences, particularly temperature changes, can be eliminated, accurate measurements of starlight by means of setenium cells will become possible.

C. S. Gager presents in the Journal of the New York Hotanical Garden some interesting facts about the selfpruning of trees, as observed in the gardon. In October the sapting poplars litter the ground about them with branches, most of which are two years old and hear winter buds. The catalpa, the allantus, the horse chestnut, the elm, the lilac, the mulberry, the maple, and seventeen or eighteen other varieties of trees have this habit of self-pruning. With some, as the maples, it occurs in spring or early summer; with others, in the autumn. The purpose appears to be to get rid of superfisous branches. The branches thus eliminated are not dend to begin with, but die as a result of the pruning process, which begins by the formation of an "abecission layer," or a brittle zone, at the base of

The factory reader sits at the rear of the workroom, enthroned upon an elevated stand. The readers earn from forty to sixty dollars a week, reading for a period of three or four hours a day. As a rule, each factory has two readers, and newspapers are taken up in the moralng and books or novels in the afternoon.

The selection of the book or novel to be read is an interesting feature. It takes the character of a political election, each man voting for the book he wants. Michelangelo.

Michelangelo stood in the front rank both as painter and sculptor. In both arts he was worthy of the highest praise. The fresco of the "Last Judgment" in the Sistine chapel is considered the most wonderful picture in the world, showing the omnipotence of artistic science and the flery daring of conception that but few other paintings can even approximate. In sculpture the "Moses" and the "Slaves," not to mention other pieces, range among the finest creations of the art and proclaim Michelangelo to have been as masterful with his chisel as he was with his stonemason, whom he saw trying to break a large stone with what seemed a very small hammer. "You never can do it," the preacher prophesied. "Sure, sir, that's all you know about breaking stones," replied Paddy, as he hammered away industriously. After hundreds of these peckings there came a slight crack. A few more and the great stone fell apart. "Now," asked the Irishman, "would your honor tell me which one of those blows it was that broke the stone?" "Why, the last one, to be sure." "There you're wrong, sir, It was the first blow, and the last blow, and all the middle ones, sir."

Hid with Christ in God.

In proportion as our life centers in Christ will evil cease to have power over us. The secret of Christ's victory over temptation was His abiding in the positions and the color of the pictures Father, and the abiding of the Father were carefully worked out. The cost in Him. As a result He was able to say, "The prince of this world hath nothing in Me." Satan had no hold upon Him nor had he a chance to get any hold upon Him; for Christ was so filled with the Father that evil found furniture and furnishings of every no entrance. He had tried in the wilkind, even to inkstands and penracks, derness-Christ had repulsed him. He and moved back the books, records and had made the attempt at other times, but he had always failed. Neither can sin have hold on us if our lives are hid with Christ in God.

Paul said nothing about the number A religion without the Holy Ghost of his converts.
