

CYNTHIA WESTOVER ALDEN

The Romantic Career of an American Woman. T F individual greatness be measured by the degree of one's unselfish helpfulness to the world, Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden, President-General of the International Sunshine Society, and one of the best known club women an America, deserves high place on the roll of contemporary fame. As a motherless child of four she was taken by her father, Oliver S.

Westover, an expert mineralogist, from their home in Iowa to the wild pioneer life of Colorado. There, as she grew up, she rode and hunted with her father, studied under his loving tutorship, geology and history and the broader teachings of Nature, in the great wild open-air-school, where she handled a rifle, a larist, and the bow and arrow at about the age when girls have hardly put aside their dolls.

Those were dangerous days when she and her father seven times made the trip over the Rockies, where savage Indians hiding in the tall grass or behind rocks in the passes, made life a terror to the whites. She had heroic courage and a hunger to help humanity, which she now reveals in simpler and more conventional ways. She crawled through the grass to bathe and bind the wounds of their driver who had been scalped by the Indians; saved a miner from lynching by stepping bravely between the victim and an angry mob; was lowered over a precipice to bring up the dead body of a child; threw herself on a lighted lamp that had been dropped near gunpowder; killed a black bear that attacked her; kept a pack of flerce coyotes at bay with a stick in her hand and rescued a number of snow-bound miners.

At seventeen she was managing a district school at Boulder, Colorado, and shortly afterward graduated from the State University. She sang for some years as a church soprano in New York and later acted as inspector of customs where her fluency in German, Italian, French and Spanish proved of great value as they also did in her splendid work in journalism and many other lines of activity.

Her Sunshine Society with more than 200,000 members all over the world, is devoted to spreading sweetness and sunshine, to making the world day by day happier and brighter by acts of kindness and love. It makes Christianity practical, not an occasional impulse, but a continuous, pervading atmosphere of the radiation of good. She is the wife of John Alden, a lineal escendant of John Alden of the Mayflower.
