This Statement May Be Generally Attributed to the Lack of Good Health.

We want to talk to people who are nervous, who suffer frequent headaches. who don't enjoy their food, who are irritable, quickly lose their temper, are so tired and worn out that they feel they must give up, and have become so despondent that life doesn't seem worth living. We know exactly what is the matter with people in this condition can tell them how to regain good health and that buoyancy of feeling which makes life seem all sunshine and happi-

Most of the above described condi tions are chiefly caused by catarrha inflammation of the branes. This delicate web-like lining of the body becomes inflamed and congested until weakness and mental de pression follows. The only way that this can be overcome is through treatment of the blood. We have the treatment, and we are so positive that t will produce the results we claim for t that we will supply it to anyone with the understanding that we will return to them every penny they paid us in every instance where the treatment is not in every way satisfactory and bene-

We want you to try Rexall Mucu-Tone, which is a powerful nutritive tenic and body builder, and a mucous membrane afterative that cleanses these membranes and restores their natural and healthy functions.

Rexall Muco-Tone drives out all the catarrial poison, restores the mucous cells to good health, tones up the whole system, allays inflammation, removes ongestion, and stimulates the whole eystem to healthy activity. It is splendid for building up flesh and muscle

Trains Run Through The Fields of This Plantation

Across the river from New Orleans tions in Louisiana. It is run with system, energy and intelligence. has normally 2,000 acres planted in cane, and its sugar mill, representing an outlay of nearly half a million dollars, is capable of manufacturing both the raw and refined grades, says the New York Evening Post.

The cane fields, level as a floor, are composed of the black mould of the Mississippi bottoms, probably the richest soil on earth. Narrow gauge tramways run into all parts of the fields, and dummy locomotives draw long trains of cars, some empty, some loaded with case. The case grows ten to fifteen feet high, and dense as a jungle. Nearly 500 workers are employed to cut the cane and tie it into bundles for transportation to the mill. Here great forks seize it and elevate it to the grinders, huge steel rollers with a pressure of 320 tons. From there the juice falls into pipes, which conduct it to the settling and bleaching Sad Case of Mr. Tropgleton, Who tanks, while the crushed cane goes another way, and is fed to the boil-

In the tanks the juice is treated with lime and sulphur to remove debris and clarify it, and then is conducted by more pipes to the evaporating pans, where it is boiled by steam in a vacuum, until it becomes syrup. This eyrup then goes to other pans and is evaporated until it becomes sugar mixed with molasses; thence which I sit in a chair that makes cylinders), which separate the molasses by centrifugal force, and drain Miss Irms Parker 60 the latter into its own receptacle. The raw sugar that remains dull brown Mrs. J. W. Hughes...... 66 in color is either sold in its crude state or is refined by further and more intricate processes.

In talking with the writer the manager of this estate said:

"We first came here in 1869, and have been in possession of the plantation ever since. Sugar cane is raised from slins or cuttings. We plant all the way from November 1 to March 1. It takes four tons of cane to plant an acre-in other words, one-quarter of all the cane we grow must be reserved for seed, and as cane is worth two dollars and a half a ton, this is quite an item. We get two, sometimes three, crops from one planting. The first crop is called plant cane, the second firstyear stubble, the third second-year

"In Cuba, they get seven and eight crops from one planting, and have been known to make fifteen crops on new land: that is one reason why they can produce sugar cheaper than we can. Another is cheaper labor: a third, that while the average yield of cane with us is twenty tons to the acre, in Cuba it is thirty-five tons. "Our average grinding season is ten weeks. All the rest of the time is spent in raising the cane. We have ten miles of track with cars and locomotives, and all our hauling to the mill and elevating there is done by steam power. For labor we depend mainly on the negro, though of late we have used some Italians. That is the great problem with us now-labor.

"The negro is the best laborer if only be could be made to work. is acclimated. He can stand the hard work in the sun. He knows how: but we can't make him work; we can't depend on him. Sign a contract with him and advance a dollar or two on it (they all demand that to bring their goods from the last place), and that is the last you see of him; or if he comes he will leave you in the height of the season without the slightest compunction of conscience. Or if he pretends to work it will be for two or three days only in the week: the rest of the time he will be basking in the sun on the levee or lying about the "blind tigers." where diquor is sold.

"We have demonstrated that the more we pay him the less he works It is this way: He will work just enough to buy necessary food and clothes. Suppose that costs him $2 a week; at $1.50 a day he will work two days to get it, at $1 a day three days. Eight years ago we were paying our teamsters $1 a day and cutters 80 cents a day. Now we pay the teamsters $1.50 a day and cutters $1.25, and are getting a third less work done than under the lower

"Understand me, there is no prefudice against the negro with us. came here believing in him, and disposed to treat him fairly. We have always done so. Today we would put a large force to planting cane, but we can't get the men. We have tried Italians, but they are not used to the work nor the climate, and are not so satisfactory. It is as teamsters they fail most ignominiously: whereas a negro and a mule understand one another and will work together like

TIME IN TURKEY.

Way of Measuring and How It Makes For Inefficiency in Service.

Nicholas C. Adossides, writing o the Sultan of Turkey in the American Magazine, says:

"In addition to laziness, there inaccuracy; the present Turkish of ficial is naturally inaccurate, and hab it and conceit make him more so. This perhaps is due to the way in which Turkey measures time. Twelve o'clock in the day corresponds with sunset; that is to say, whatever hour the sun sets, it must always be twelve. Consequently the hours change always, getting later the first half of the year and earlier in the last, which compels everybody to put his watch to daily torture. So no one in Turkey can flatter himself that he has the exact time; the most strict of Englishmen soon lose, his

"Consequently the State employees are not bound down by very severe discipline; no one expects them to arrive at their office at any particular time especially as the majority of them go hardly at all. As for the most industrious they appear for two or three hours in the afternoon only, and rather late; in the morning, State offices are usually closed. Besides this, work days are rather scarce for the race of officials. Friday is the Sabbath of the Mohammedans: Saturday is the day after a feast day. and one does not do much then; Sunday the Greeks and Armenians remain, like good Christians, at home and the Mohammedans generally imi tate so good an example: Monday is again the morrow of a feast day: Wednesday there is a meeting of the Council of Ministers and few employees go then to the ministry. With religious festivals added in, it is easy to understand that out of the three hundred and sixty-five days of the year there are not many left to consecrate to the interests of the Ottoman Empire!"

HARD ON CHAIRS.

Puts Out of Business Every Chair He Sits In.

"Some men are hard on clothes. It s my misfortune," said Mr. Troggleton, "to be hard on chairs.

"I'm not so heavy either. I only weigh about 175 pounds, but some how I always wreck sooner or later all the chairs I sit in. I seem to nave some sort of sag twist or something in the way in me, even when I think I am sitting nicely and quietly, break or start something.

"Of course I never would think of sitting down at all anywhere in a Chippendale or Louis XVI. or any other sort of slender, spiderlegged chair, because for me such a chair might as well be mounted on broom splints. Men heavier than I could sit in such chairs and maybe tip back in them without doing any damage: but if I should so much as stir in a chair like that its legs would crack and groan and it would go down.

"Why is this, do you suppose? am not a restless person. I don't twist and turn and fidget in a chair, and yet no chair seems to stay together if I once begin to use it. I soon sit through a cane seated chair, and I have in time splintered seats of veneer.

"If I use any particular rocking chair for long 4 start the back away from the arms and if I sit in an armchair I work the arms loose, and any sort of chair that I sit in for any length of time I am sure to start at all its points so that it gets weavy and wiggly; and I am likely to spread a leg or two so that the rungs drop out at that end. "Honest injan. I don't know why It is, but I certainly do seem to be Oldun-Oh! you're one hard on chairs."-New York Sun.

Gold Going Abroad.

It is an old-time superstition among Wall street speculators that exportation of gold is "a bear point on stocks." This originated in the days when the country was poor and the bulk of its business was being done with capital borrowed from Europe. Money was scarce and notes of interest very high. The withdrawal of a large volume of money in the form of gold necessarily meant increased scarcity and still higher interest rates and therefore to reduce the value of securities. But that is all ancient history. We have long ago bought back the bulk of our securities from European cap italists, and as a result of our enormous exports during the last ten years the old world owes us money We have the enormous sum of $1. 653,881,907 gold in the United States and enough currency of other kinds to bring the total amount to nearly three and one-half billions, which would allow $35 to every man, woman and child included in our present popnlation, estimated at 88,209,000.—New York Herald.

Found a Better Place. Mark Twain says: Once when I was going out to visit some friends told George, my negro servant, to lock the house and put the key under a certain stone near the steps. He agreed to do so. It was late at night when I returned. I went to the stone under which the key was supposed to have been hidden. was gone. I hunted around for about fifteen minutes, but still no key. Finally I went to George's bousehe roomed outside-and rapped vigorously upon the door. A black head which I had no difficulty in recogniz ing as George's, popped out of a upstairs window. "Where did you put that key, you black rascal!" I roared "Oh, massa," answered George, found a better place for it!"
