EATING IN THE OLD DAYS.

Guests at Banquets Used Their Own Knives and Forks.

Has a Short Separation a Salutary Frank's and mine—is doing things to-Even at so late a period as the restoration, in 1660, the London Chroninext week," said the woman who had like them, because of liking to be with cle says, it was the custom for guests to take their own knives and forks to an English banquet. Pepys records that he did this when he went to the lord mayor's feast in the Guildhall, In the previous reign the lord chamberlain had found it necessary to issue regulations for the benefit of officers on principle. Then married people invited to dine at the royal table. They were required to wear clean boots, not to be half drunk on their arrival, not to drink more than one goblet to every two dishes, not throw the bones under the table nor to lick their flagers.

The Stuarts undoubtedly did much to refine English table manners, for it was one of the points admired in Mary Queen of Scots that the customs she introduced from France made her court and royal banquets more exquisite and genteel than those of her rival, Queen Elizabeth. As forks came into use the old-time importance of the table napkins began to wane. From being a necessity it became a luxury, on the fastidious use of which etiquette has at various times placed strange values.

Under the third empire in France St. Beuve brought disgrace upon himself because at breakfast at the Tull eries he carelessly opened his napkin and placed it over his two knees. To this he added the crime of cutting his egg in two at the middle. Court etiquette prescribed that the half folded napkin should lie on the left knee and the top of the egg was to be merely broken with the edge of the spoon and drained with the tip of the

Cough Caution

Never, positively never poleon your lungs. If you cough—even from a simple cold only—you should always heal, soothe, and case the irritated broachial tubes. Don't blindly suppress is with stopelying poison. It's strange how some things finally come about. For twenty years Dr. Shoos has constantly warned people not to take coug mixtures or prescriptions containing Opium Chloroform, or similar poisons. And now—a little chough—Congress says "Put it on the label if poisons are in your Cough Mixture." Good! Very good!! Hereafter for this very reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicina, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only sais, but is is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance these particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and note the difference. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Chloroform, or similar poisons, And now a life
