ARE MICROBES IN YOUR SCALP?

It Has Been Proved That Microbes Cause Baldness.

Professor Unna of Hamburg, Germany, and Dr. Sabourand, the leading French dermatologist, discovered that a microbe causes baldness. Their theory has time and again been amply verified through research experiments carried on under the observation of eminent scientists. This microbe lodges in the Sebum, which is the natural hair oil, and when permitted to flourish it destroys the hair follicles and in time the pores entirely close, and scalp gradually takes on a shiny appearance. When this happens there is no hope of the growth of hair being revived.

We have a remedy which will, we honestly believe, remove drandruft, exterminate the microbe, promote good circulation in the scalp and around the hair roots, tighten and revitalize the hair roots, and overcome baldness, so long as there is any life left in the hair roots.

We back up this statement with our own personal guarantee that this remedy called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will be supplied free of all cost to the user if it fails to do as we state.

It will frequently help to restore gray and faded hair to its original color, providing loss of color has been caused by disease; yet it is in no sense a dye. Rexall "93" Hair Tonic accomplishes these results by aiding in making every hair root, follicle and pigment gland strong and active, and by stimulating a natural flow of coloring pigment throughout the hair cells.

We exact no obligations or promises—we simply ask you to give Rexall "93" Hair Tonic a thorough trial and if not satisfied tell us and we will refund the money you paid us for it. Two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain it only at our store—The Rexall Store. T. R. Morris.

Seldom.

It is seldom that a man succeeds in overestimating his own unimportance.

Tragedies Told in Headlines.

Modus Vivendi.

The plumber had married the barber's daughter.
 "No tips when you shave me hereafter," he said.
 "All right," quoth the barber, "and no charging it in the bill when you walk between my house and your shop any more."
 On this basis they all lived happily ever after.

The Soul of Business.

Merchant—Your former employer tells me you were the quickest clerk in the place.
 Applicant for Situation (doubtfully)—Yes, sir?
 Merchant—He says you could put the books into the safe, lock up, and start for home in just a trifle over a minute and twenty seconds.

Discretion.

"We hear," said the mere man, "a whole lot about self-made man, but never anything about self-made woman."
 "Well," said the president of the Female Beauty club, "you see—er—well, perhaps—er—it isn't necessary to discuss that question."—Browning's Magazine.

SHE LOST OUT.

Mrs. B.—It doesn't always pay to husband one's resources.
 Mrs. W.—Why not?
 Mrs. B.—Well, judge so from Mrs. Goodthing's experience. She let her husband have the $10,000 she inherited from her grandmother and he lost it all in speculation.

A Cold.

The muse this morn
 Is feeling "blue."
 We say, "Please sing."
 She says: "Kerchool!"

Closest Friends.

A.—Shadbury must be very intimate with Sir Horace Muggs. He calls him Horace.
 B.—On the contrary, Sir Horace's intimate friends call him "Orace."—Punch.

Then He Faded Away.

Boreleigh—Chaperons are a nuisance, aren't they?
 Miss Phayre—Oh, not always. If it wasn't for my chaperon some men would hang around me all day.

Not Much.

Patience—You say she was blind to all his entreaties?
 Patrice—Yes; until he gave her a solitaire.
 "Oh, then, she wasn't stone blind."

Advice.

First Deaf Mute—What would you do in a case like that?
 Second Deaf Mute—I'd treat her with silent contempt; I wouldn't move a finger when I met her.

Before and After.

"Before I was married life was one continual round of pleasure."
 "And isn't it now?"
 "No; it's one continual round of economy now."

A Man's Opinion.

"Pa, what's a superman?"
 "One whose wife thinks he is better than his neighbors give him credit for being."

HOW EXPERTS FORM OPINIONS

Distinguishing Marks May Be Forged, but the Man Who Knows Cannot Be Deceived.

A dealer in antiques was talking about art experts. "Take, for instance," he said, "an expert in old pewter. You think, perhaps, he distinguishes old pewter by the marks—the Tudor roses, the maker's name, and so forth? Bless your heart, those marks are continually forged. No, he distinguishes old pewter by the feel. "It is like the china expert. He, with his eyes closed, will distinguish hard and soft paste china. It's the feel again—his fingers trained by years and years of study till each one has a brain in it."

"Oriental rug experts have a very subtle sense of rug differences. Sometimes they distinguish a rug by its smell—the smell of the wool and the dyes. This seems incredible till you think of the Harris tweed, that imported cloth that you yourself can distinguish by its smell—the smell, which never leaves it, of the peat smoke of the cottage wherein it was woven on a hand loom."
 "Wool sorters, a less highly paid class of experts, can take up a handful of wool, and by its color tell you whether it came from Texas, from the territories, from England or from Canada. The soil, you see, gives its own color to the wool."

Gag for Noisy Geese.

The geese which play an important role in a certain opera recently presented in Milan, Italy, have been so noisy of late during rehearsals, drowning the voices of the singers, that a veterinary surgeon was consulted the other day, and he overcame the difficulty by inserting in the bill of each goose a chloroformed plug, causing temporary paralysis of the vocal chords, just before the rising of the curtain.

Another Reason.

An amusing story is told of Edmund Kean, who, one night, played Othello with more than his usual intensity. An admirer who met him on the street next day, was loud in his congratulations: "I really thought you would choke Iago, Mr. Kean; you seemed so tremendously in earnest." "In earnest?" said the tragedian. "I should think so. Hang the fellow? He was trying to keep me out of the focus."

No Pleasure.

A barrister, having wearied the court by a tedious plea, was interrupted by adjournment, and said, "I shall have the pleasure of addressing the court, then, on Friday." Very quickly came this response from the chief justice: "The court will hear you on Friday, but pleasure was out of the question long ago."—The Green Bag.

Ancient Vaults Exposed.

During heavy rains in Kildare county, Ireland, a portion of the walls of historic Kildare abbey, Castledermot, became undermined and fell, when it was discovered that underneath were vaults in which were skulls and human remains. It is calculated that these remains have been there for the last eight centuries, since the time the abbey was a monastery.

But Far Off.

A woman who was broad and not long stood in a crowded car the other evening, her arms full of bundles and her body careening and lurching dangerously. A man in the seat in front of which she stood got tired of snatching his toes back from imminent danger and growled, "Madam, a strap is above you." "So's Heaven," retorted the woman who was broad and not long.

Unhurt by Long Fall.

A fall from a second-story window of her house in Philadelphia did little more than jar an aged lady the other day. When members of the family reached her side they found that she had sustained only a few bruises. A doctor said no bones were broken, and that she would be about again in a day or so. She was leaning from the bathroom window when she lost her balance and fell to the yard.

GILBERT SHORTER,

In "The Soul of the Violin." Mr. Gilbert Shorter, Director of the Chicago Conservatory Stock Company, which is to present "The Strange Adventures of Miss Brown," under the auspices of the Women's Club of Downers Grove, at the Auditorium Tuesday evening, is widely known as an interpretative reader and actor. While in London he was associated with Sir Henry Irving and Beerholm Tree at His Majesty's Theater, and he was most successful in New York City both as a teacher of dramatic art and oratory and in professional appearances, giving a number of recitals under the patronage of the most prominent people. He reads with power and expression and his dramatic interpretations of literature with a musical setting have much artistic novelty.

AT THE MOTIOGRAPH.

Saturday, April 13.
 Percival Chubbs and the Widow. Percival Chubbs, a widower, in love with the widow Oldfield. He pops the question one night and is accepted. Not long after he discovers that the widow is bald and wears a wig. Chubbs now sets about to rid himself of his false affinity, and accordingly writes her declaring the prospective marriage impossible. This makes the widow furious and indignant. Her son takes sides with his mother and proceeds to Chubbs' house, where he overawes and threatens Chubbs to a standstill. Fearing bodily harm, Chubbs retracts his statement and promises to make good his former offer of marriage.

Chubbs also has a son, a former athlete, who comes to his father's rescue by devising a plan to break the engagement. The day following the widow receives a letter from Chubbs stating that he cannot live without her and if agreeable he will call on her and introduce his son. That evening Chubbs and his son arrive at the widow's house. Chubbs pretends he loves the widow as deeply as ever, while the young man retires to an adjoining room, where they indulge in a friendly bout with boxing gloves. The widow's son now finds to his surprise he has at last met his superior, and receives a sound thrashing at the hands of young Chubbs. The disturbance brings the widow upon the scene, where she finds her dearly beloved son's face pummeled to a frazzle. This arouses her anger to such an extent she forthwith breaks the engagement. Chubbs and his son, chuckling over their success, are dismissed from the house.
