Inscrutable Way of Providence. With reference to the final extinction of the latter day successor of the Delmonico restaurant, it is related that two Germans, fresh from Chicago, once visited New York, and one well acquainted with the city invited his friend to dine at Delmonico's, where a dinner for two and a bottle of wine were ordered. The place and fare were praised until the bill of $11 was presented. This they considered an extortion.

They paid, however, and while walking down Broadway the excited German commenced to swear at the supposed extortion. His friend then

"Do not schwear, Yawcop. It is wicked to schwear. God has punished that man Delmonico."

"How!" pocket full shpooms.

A Utilitarian View.

A Brooklyn man, confined to his home by illness, recently surprised a visitor by revealing that be was studying Latin. "Why," asked the visitor, "do you bother about Latin? That's a dead language. If you must study, why not take up German, or French, or Spanish?" The sick man smiled. "My doctor says I have not long to live," he said. "That's why I study Latin. It's a dead language, and, as I'll be dead a long time, it's likely to come in mighty handy."

The Sincerest Flattery.

Everything about Aunt Dorothy eemed lovely and wholly destrable to Bobby. Even an accident that broke a piece from one of her front teeth produced at last what seemed to her small admirer an attractive result.

On his first visit to the dentist Bobby hore with more or less patience the work which had to be done, and then made a request.

"Right in the middle, in front," he said, "I should like a copper-toed tooth like Aunt Dorothy's."-Youth's Companion.

Easy Waiting.

A newspaper woman, a spinster, went to interview a member of one of the leading firms in Boston and was told to wait five minutes for him to be at liberty. Three-quarters of an hour later he came hurrying toward her with, "Well, Miss W., I would never walt so long as this for any man!" "Oh, Mr. Cole," she retorted, "If you had waited forty-five years for a man you wouldn't mind an extra half hour."

AMUSEMENTS.

CORT.

"Ready Money" still continues to entertain and delight Chicago theatergoers as no play has for many seasons. Despite the fact that the majority of playhouses in the big city are closing for the season, owing to the approachhot weather, this delightfu comedy, written by James Montgomery, runs on with no abatement in the large attendance it has enjoyed throughout its entire thirteen weeks. "Ready Money" is a play that both thrills and refreshes its auditors, and does much to make theatergoing worth while.

WANTED-A Wife (April 11) .--Tired of leading the lonely bachelor life. Tom resolves to dispose of himself in wedlock, and having no particular girl of his dreams, advertises for "a pretty wife."

Of more than a hundred responses from willing girls, old maids, grass widows and otherwise, Tom chooses that of an orphan girl, twenty-two years old, signing herself "Mary Smith," and arranges to meet her on the arrival of the express in Range Town. A striped parasol is to be the mark of identification. Tom engages a bridal suite at the hotel, and in his Sunday best, goes to meet his bride-to-be. His heart beats faster at sight of the striped parasol, but great expectations are quashed on discovery of the ugliness beneath it.

Meanwhile the boys have smuggled the real, pretty Mary Smith to the home of one of their married number and left her in the care of the wife while they follow the fate of Tom. But Tom has already had enough of his supposed intended and makes his get-away at the first opportunity. Riding in the woods be meets with the real Mary, who, out for a walk, has sprained her ankle. He carries her to the house and learns the true story Love is instantaneous and mutual and the boys return to find the joke turn ed on themselves.

MILK INSPECTION IS NO FUN

Incident Showing How Hard It is to Force Sanitary Rules on Dirty People.

The trials and tribulations of a milk inspector trying to force insanitary people to live according to sanitary rules are shown in the issue of the Healthologist, the official organ of the Milwaukee health department. The story follows:

A Milwaukee milk inspector during a farm inspection, came upon a place hopelessly fifthy, disorderly and run down. A motherly person with a big heart, but firm and weird convictions, listened to the young man's suggestions. Then looking over her spectacles pityingly, she said:

"Boy, my mother was ninety-seven years old when she died. She was dirtier than I am, and lived in a dirtier house and drank dirtier milk. If she could stand it I guess there ain't no reason why I and the city | friend once asked the osteopath how olks that get milk from this farm can't stand it too." And not being able to answer that argument, the milk inspector left her -kindly withal, but yet voicing her indignation over "them there new fangled idees of cleanliness."

Power of Vegetable Growth.

A tar macadam pavement stretching from the school of gunnery Shoeburyness (Eng.) to the sea is present in a state of violent if silent eruption. About a fortnight ago the surface became covered with what may be called "bilsters," raised a little above the common level, which attracted much wondering attention.

From each of these, in a few days, a series of cracks appeared, extending themselves in rays from a center. Finally came up a broad, soft shoot, looking extremely well pleased with itself and its work, which proved to be so old and well known a friend as the thistle. At this moment there are hundreds of those bold intruders showing defiantly through the pavement, affording a most interesting illustration of the power of vegetable growth,

WHY WE DETEST PARASITES

Feeling of Instinctive Revulsion Justified, for They Are Carriers of Disease.

The feeling of instinctive revulsion against parasites of all kinds which characterizes humanity generally, and which is due to something much more than the mere pain or annoyance that their bites might inflict, become more interesting as further discoveries show the role of insects in the spread of

Unfortunately this natural abhorrence has not been enough to protect man under conditions of poverty and uncleanliness from harboring such parasites, and now those who understand how much more than a mere personal annoyance is in question from the existence of parasites must take up the problem to eradicate them.

The possibility of the bedbug conveying relapsing fever, typhoid and leprosy has been suggested and apparently there is no parasite of man that may not be a mode of disease conveyance. Flies, fleas, mosquitoes and bugs not only are all under suspicion, but most of them are also actually demonstrated as ordinary and frequent conveyors of diseases of various kinds.

Health authorities must now take up the problem of getting rid of insect parasites in order to stamp out disease. - From the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Mother's Chair.

Mother's chair had rocked the whole family. It made a creaking noise as moved, but there was music in its sound. It was just high enough to allow us children to put our heads into her lap. That was the bank where we deposited all our hurts and worries. Oh, what a chair that was. . . . It was a very wakeful chair! In the sick day of children other chairs could not keep awake-it kept easily awake. That chair knew all the old lullables, and all those wordless songs which mothers sing to their children. Songs in which all pity and compassion and sympathetic influences are combined. That old chair has stopped rocking for a good many years. It may be set up in the loft or garret, but it holds a queenly power yet .- T. DeWitt Talmage.

Parliamentary Law.

No one man is responsible for parliamentary law. It was born of deliberative exigencies. Its rules, precedents and usages are contained neither in statutes nor court decisions and are only binding when a deliberative body chooses to make them so. Most of the rules now accepted had their origin in the English parliament. Changes have been made to meet the needs of our legislative bodies, even as changes were made in the English parliamentparliamentary law growing from the simple procedure of the Anglo Saxon town most to the more complicated deliberative machinery of today.

How He Treated Her.

A certain osteopath was treating a young woman who had very weak ankles and wrists. As she lived in a town quite a distance from his own city, he was forced to leave the city Saturday of each week and go to the town in which the young woman lived, give her the treatment Sunday, and return to the office Monday. A he had arranged to give the young woman the treatment for her ankles and wrists when she lived at such a distance, and the osteopath replied: "Oh, I go out and treat her week ends."-Lippincott's Magazine.

Blackbirds' Courage.

At Heriot Gardens, a new and pretty suburb of Burntisland, a cat upon a garden wall was about to pounce upon a female blackbird sitting on her nest of eggs, when her mate, which was on the watch, sounded the alarm.

Acting together, both set upon the cat with a vigor that hustled it off the wall into a neighboring garden. The birds pursued it along the path, keeping at close quarters till it escaped under cover. Victory was complete, and the enemy has not approached the place since.-London Globe.

Silent English Crowds. Silence is a great characteristic of an English crowd, it seems. The English people are generally very quiet. Once I went to Shepherd's Bush with my French friend. He said to me. "Can you believe that there are some ten thousand people in this ground? Just shut your eyes, you would feel you were standing in a desert!" Yes, he was only too true. In France or Japan they would make deafening noises.-Observations of a Japanese in England.

QUEER THINGS ABOUT PAIN

Patient May Feel It in Limb That Has Been Amputated, or in Wrong Place.

Pain sometimes behaves in a curious fashion. There was a soldier in London, after the Boer war, who complained of excruciating neuralgic pains in his right foot. This very much amused his friends, for he had lost his right leg. The explanation was that the pain happened to be in the trunks of those nerves, which had sent branches to the foot,

Sometimes a patient comes to doctor complaining of pain in the knee, and he is greatly surprised when the doctor tells him that the site of the affection is not the knee, but the hip. We are all familiar with the pain under the shoulder blade which comes from an afflicted liver.

The stomach, too, can produce pain in many parts of the body. A disordered stomach will give us pain as far away as the head, and, when one gets a cramp in his toe, it is often due to acidity of the stomach. Swallow a pinch of soda and the cramp will dis-

An aching tooth will produce neuralgic pains in the face, and very often a violent pain at the back of the head is due to the faraway kidneys, which themselves may suffer no pain at the Hints to Lovelorn Gents.

If she makes a practice of eating onions for supper every time you call, it is a sign that she is indifferent toward your suit.

If you spend a lot of money sending flowers to her every day it may make a hit with her, but she will marry somebody who has more sense.

Don't talk to her about love in a cottage. Talk about a brownstone bungalow and spring the cottage on her after you get her.

If she is handsome, tell her about it, and if she isn't, tell her anyway.

Have an automobile catalogue in your coat pocket where she can catch a glimpse of it.

Definition of the Beau.

A beau is one who arranges his curled locks gracefully, who ever smells of balms and cinnamon, who hums the songs of the Nile and Cadiz, who throws his sleek arms into various attitudes, who idles away the whole day among the chairs of the ladies, who is ever whispering in some one's ear, who reads little billetdoux from this quarter and that, and writes them in return; who avoids ruffling his dress by contact with his neighbor's sleeve, who knows with whom everybody is in love; who flutters from feast to feast; who can recount exactly the pedigree of Hirpinus. What do you tell me, is this a beau. Cotilus? Then a beau, Cotilus, is a very trifling thing.

Had to Rename His Villa,

The residents of a certain suburb of Chicago were for a time governed by a passion for giving sweet, poetical names to their "estates." There was one such man who built a handsome villa, calling it "The Nutshell." Thus was the home introduced to his friends, and it became widely known, To the surprise of all, therefore, the name was one day suddenly changed to "Sylvan Nook," and a flood of inquirles soon began to pour in.

"Why have you given your home a new name?" a friend asked. "What was the matter with "The Nutshell?" "I sickened of being joshed about it," said the owner, with a sigh, "There isn't a boy within two miles hereabouts who hasn't stopped and rung the doorbell to ask if the colo-

The tallest tree in the world is the Australian eucalyptus, reaching a total altitude of 480 feet. The biggest are the mammoth trees of California, some of which are 276 to 376 feet in height and 108 feet in circumference at the base. From measurements of the rings it is believed that some of these trees are from 2,000 to 2,500 years old. The oldest tree in the world is said to be on the island of Kos, off the coast of Asia Minor. It is several thousand years old, but just how many no one has dared to say. The tree is carefully preserved by a wall of masonry around ft, and the trunk is 30 feet in circum-

Stool of Repentance.

For many years in front of the pulpit in Scottish churches persons under censure sat during the service. Afterward they stood to receive public rebuke. From this practice we derive the "stool of repentance."
