FILM STORY

AT THE MOTIOGRAPH.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 10.

The Runaways-Harry and May Nugent returned from their honeymoon and settled in a nice little home in Brooklyn. They were a devoted couple, but May's experience at housekeeping was a little shy, and it caused the first quarrel. Angry and bitter one day, Harry writes a letter to his pretty wife, telling her he is going away disgusted. He packs his suitcase and catches the 10:30 train for Seaville. May, whose feelings are also hurt, has made a similar plan. Not noticing her husband's letter, which he hid under a blotter, she writes him an almost identical one and leaves for Seaville on the 11:30. There she engages a room at the same hotel and is located next door to Harry. Neither is very happy; the cooking is nothing wonderful, and May is annoyed by the eyeing of the gilded youths. Both regret the situation and retire early, only to lie awake, each thinking of the other. During the night a bad man attempted to rob the guests. May hearing strange Harry does exactly the same, and in the semi-darkness they rush into each other's arms. May thinks she has bumped into the burglar. The guests are aroused by her shrieks, and attaches rush to the scene. The lights are turned up and consternation prevails as they see a man and woman in demi-toilet rush into each other's arms. When the excitement is over Harry draws his wife into his room and the next morning more surprise is in order when the maid finds the lady's room empty and sees a pair of gentleman's shoes and a pair of lady's pumps outside of the room next door.

MAJESTIC.

A bill of extraordinary interest has been provided for the Majestic Theater, Chicago, for the week beginning August 12. After so many great bills as have been given here it would seem rather difficult to discover any novelties, but there is evidently a source of supply always available for this unusual theater. One of the headline features will be Edward Abeles, probably the most popular young actor in America, who comes this time with a new comedy by that noted comedian, William Collier, who wrote it with the aid of Edgar Selwyn and produced it himself after selecting the hack- moved by Trustees Mahoney and Hering at the Church." Mr. Abeles | Motion carried, all voting aye. Said is assisted by a cast of half a dozen excellent artists,

Another crowning effort of the bill will be the appearance together of two of the most famous of newspaper cartoonists who are known to all readers of Chicago newspapers and particularly to the Tribune's constituency. One of these artists is Clair Briggs, whose "Days of Real Sport" may be accounted among the classics in cartoonland. His trade mark of "Oh, Skinnay." is a bousehold word.

Mr. Sidney Smith, who is co-star with Briggs, has made a big reputation with the Tribune in a wonderfully original and humorous series of drawings, showing the experiences of "Old Doc Yak." By way of sustained in vention and breezy humor this series is most unusual and has fixed Mr Smith's status among the stars. Other features on this great bill are Mc Connell and Simpson, the convulsing sketch artists; William Dillan, song writer; the Colonial Sextette, and half a dozen kindred entertainers of the first rank.

COMRADESHIP OF FATHER AND SON

Portrayed Strongly in "Putting Over"-Third Week at the Olympic, Chicago.

It is generally conceded that comradeship between father and son is conducive to family happiness. This element is brought out particularly strong in "Putting it Over, the Lee Arthur and Frank Hatch comedy, in its third week at the Olympic Theater, Chicago.

Amos Sterling, a financier, who sends his son. Ross, to college, is broad-minded enough to overlook his son's escapades. When the boy gets into trouble the father, instead of scolding him, helps him out. Through the entire play father and son are pictured in the light of "good pals." Consequently, when the young man finds that his father is involved in financial difficulties, he gives up his intended calling of being a lawyer and becomes a professional baseball player, using the salary he earns to make up his father's shortage.

Foxes often kill buzzards and the smaller hawks that have been impelled to attack them through hunger. They have mainly done this by dragging the birds through branches and brushwood; for they usually have their talons deeply imbedded in their intended victim, and are unable to let them go.

Sensitiveness of Blow-Fly.

It is well known, says Knowledge, that the blow-fly (Calliphora vomitoria) has an extrordinarily keen sensitiveness to the odor of fesh, detecting it from a distance. Xaxier Raspail has made some observations on the rapidity with which the flies find a bird has just died and he maintains that they do not alight a second before that. An apoplectic pigeon that looked dead, but was not, was left unvisited. A moribund magple, lying beside two others which had just been killed, was left unvisited, though the flies were on the dead birds just beside it. The instinct not to lay eggs in anything not quite dead seems to be strongly developed. But Raspail goes on to draw the hazardous conclusion that in the article of death an animal gives off a volatile something said plot, and subdivision being known of infinite subtlety, which serves as
