THE FORAMINIFERA.

The Story of a Little Piece of Chalk.

A little piece of chalk tells an interesting history. To the unassisted eye it looks simply like a very loose and open kind of stone, but if it is ground down so thin that one can see through it—until it is thin enough to be examined with a magnifying glass—it will be found to be made up of very minute granules, embedded in which are innumerable bodies, some smaller and some larger, but on a rough average not more than a hundredth of an inch in diameter, having well-defined shape and structure. A cubic inch of some specimens of chalk may contain hundreds of thousands of these bodies. Each of the rounded bodies is made up of a number of chambers, communicating freely with one another. These oddly shaped bodies are of various forms, but one of the commonest is something like a badly grown raspberry, being formed of a number of nearly globular chambers of different sizes congregated together. They are the calcareous shells of Foraminifera.

The beds of the oceans are covered to a great extent with mud, embedded in which are millions upon millions of skeletons of Foraminifera—animals of the simplest imaginable description. A foraminifer is, in fact, a mere particle of living jelly, without defined parts of any kind—without mouth, nerves, muscles, or distinct organs, and manifesting its vitality to ordinary observation only by thrusting out and retracting from all parts of its surface long filaments which serve for arms and legs. Yet this creature is capable of feeding, growing, and multiplying; of separating the small proportion of carbonate of lime which is dissolved in sea water; and of building up that substance into a skeleton or shell for itself, according to a pattern which even the skilled artisan of the present day would find difficult to imitate.

Some of the Foraminifera are known to exist only in the greatest depths; others that float on the surface shower the bottom with their minute shells as death comes. Most of the Foraminifera of the present day are microscopic, but in a few species the shell attains a diameter of an inch or more.

In the study of geology the Foraminifera are of great interest, as they are found in all the formations, from the oldest to the newest, and in many places they make up the chief part of great rock masses. Examples may be cited the Chalk Cliffs of England, the nummulite limestones of Egypt, and the Silurian beds of Russia.

The United States Geological Survey has recently published, as Bulletin 513, a report on Pliocene and Pleistocene Foraminifera from southern California, by Rufus Mather Bagg, Jr. One of the most significant facts revealed by the study of these fossils is that the deposits are not of tropical or warm-temperate origin but are made up of types common in the north Atlantic Ocean today; some of the species correspond to forms that inhabit both the south Atlantic and south Pacific. The report, which is technical in character, may be had free on application to the Director of the United States Geological Survey at Washington, D. C.

Limit of Quackery.

A story is told of a woman whose lover had an unconquerable antipathy to red hair, so she applied to a quack to have the color altered. He replied that this was his wife's department, and that she would furnish the lady with a leaden comb and the anti-erythraean unguent which "after two or three applications will make you as fair or as dark as you please."

AMUSEMENTS.

Theatrical interest in Chicago at the present time seems to center at the Garrick Theater, where on Monday evening, November 25, Madame Lina Abarbanell, the fascinating Viennese prima donna, enters upon the third successful week of her engagement in the new American Operetta, "Miss Princess" in which she has scored the triumphant hit of her notable career and is delighting larger audiences even than in her memorably appearances in the title role of "Madame Sherry" and "The Merry Widow." "Miss Princess," her latest vehicle, which critics and theatergoers have united in proclaiming the brightest, prettiest and most tuneful musical entertainment that this season has brought forth, is the work of three newcomers—Frank Mandel, a young San Franciscan, wrote the book while the lyrics and score were supplied by Will B. and Alexander Johnston, former residents of Evanston. Adroitly blending romance, comedy and melody the authors of "Miss Princess" have fashioned a potentially appealing operetta that strikes a refreshing note of novelty and real charm in the field of light musical entertainment, and the central character, that of a young European Princess of the royal blood visiting the United States for the first time provides for Madame Abarbanell the most suitable role in which she has yet appeared.

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR" PRAISED BY PROMINENT RABBI.

"Bought and Paid For," which is ending its sixth week at the Princess Theater as the most popular play in Chicago, has inspired another clergyman to a spontaneous endorsement of its honest moral tone and its power to teach and to amuse at the same time. Rabbi Tobias Schanfarber, of the K. A. M. temple, one of the greatest Jewish churches in Chicago, follows upon the heels of Dr. Arthur J. Francis, Minister of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, with an unsolicited letter of praise. Rabbi Schanfarber writes to the management of "Bought and Paid For" as follows: "I want to tell you how much I enjoyed 'Bought and Paid For.' It is a most powerful play, and is in the hands of a company that brings out all the elements of strength that there are in it.

"It presents a phase of married life which is often met with, and which is the cause of much of the unhappiness with which many of our American homes are cursed. The author of the play has blended the more sober elements of the production with just enough of the comedy element to make it fascinating and exhilarating. "I do not wonder that the play had a year's run in the City of New York. It ought to hold the 'boards' here for that length of time. 'Bought and Paid For' should be seen by every true lover of the drama. They will be amply repaid if they visit the Princess during its stay here."

"FINE FEATHERS" TO LEAVE CHICAGO.

All good things must come to an end, and the long and prosperous engagement of "Fine Feathers" at the Cort Theater, Chicago, is now nearing its completion. This wonderful play, which has been so worthily presented in Chicago by an all star cast to the extreme delight and gratification of the thousands who packed the Cort Theater nightly since the opening night of the run, four months ago, will end its engagement in that city on Saturday, December 21, and proceed to New York City, where it is scheduled as the chief holiday attraction on Broadway. Every effort was made to continue the run of "Fine Feathers" in Chicago indefinitely, owing to its unusual prosperity, but New York demanded it and therefore Chicago must bid farewell to this remarkable production in a very few weeks. "Fine Feathers" has established a new record for Chicago. Produced in that city early in August, it was immediately pronounced by every critic and playgoer as the finest play of the century, while the cast, composed of prominent stars, has been declared a miracle. Not only has nearly every playgoer in Chicago seen and enjoyed "Fine Feathers," but it is estimated that 75 per cent of all the visitors to Chicago have made an effort to see this play while in the city. Mail orders have been received from every part of the country, indicating that the fame of the production has become nationwide.

EIGHTY MILLIONS OF RED SEALS ON SALE TODAY.

One Hundred Thousand Tuberculosis Fighters in Twenty-five Thousand Agencies Engaged in Holiday Campaign.

Beginning today over 80,000,000 Red Cross Christmas Seals will be placed on sale in almost every large city and nearly every state of the United States, the proceeds to go for the benefit of the anti-tuberculosis movement in the community where the seals are sold. This announcement was made today from headquarters of The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis which is directing the sale from its New York office.

So carefully has the sale been organized throughout the country that with the exception of the states of Florida, Oklahoma, Nevada and Idaho, Red Cross Seals will be on sale in almost every city, town, village and hamlet of the United States.

and even in Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Canal Zone.

The seals will be sold from drug stores, department stores and other kinds of stores and shops, from post offices, railway stations, booths on the street, hotel lobbies and in numerous other places. The number of agents handling the sale in this way aggregates over 25,000, while the actual number of individuals engaged in the sale, almost entirely volunteers, will reach well over 100,000. Society leaders in almost every large city of the country, notably in Pittsburg, Brooklyn, Cleveland, Chicago, Cincinnati, San Francisco and elsewhere are taking a leading part in this campaign.

The American Red Cross has already printed for the work over 85,000,000 seals and probably the edition will number 100,000,000 before the end of the campaign. Fully 10,000,000 pieces of advertising literature have already been sent out and several million more are being distributed from local and state agencies throughout the country. It is planned to make the campaign this year the largest that has ever been held. If the anticipations of the anti-tuberculosis workers are realized, no less than $400,000 will be obtained from the sale of Red Cross Seals. Practically all of the money remains in the state or city where the seals are sold, only a very small percentage of it is going to pay for the cost of the printing and distributing the seals and for the expense of running the campaign.

The National Association announces that in case any persons cannot obtain seals in the community where they live, they can secure them by writing to Red Cross Seal Headquarters, 715 Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C. Red Cross Seals cost one cent each and every seal sold is a bullet in the fight against tuberculosis.
