The Obliging Jurymen

He Had Just Time to Serve Before Taking a Train

By ELLSWORTH TOWNSEND

I like to talk with John Atherton, a retired detective friend of mine, for he has a fund of incidents that occurred during the days of his active service that I find interesting. Some of them happened to him personally, and some were told him by his fellow craftsmen during idle hours. This is one of Atherton's stories that especially pleased me from the ingenuity and assurance perpetrated by a rogue.

have had an engagement himself, he assumed to be in a hurry. He made a consultation with the prisoner's attorney—whom he had assigned to defend him—who said that he had little or no evidence for the prisoner and did not think what he had would require ten minutes to bring it out. Upon this the judge told the obliging jurymen that he was very sure he would have plenty of time to make his train.
