Shortly after the restoration he asked Fouche, his minister of police (who had filled the same office under Napoleon) whether he had been efficiently spied upon during his exile in England. After a considerable amount of pressing. Fouche admitted that one of the members of the royal household, the Duc de Blacas, used to furnish regular reports concerning his master's movements. "How much did you pay for his services?" inquired the king. "A fixed allowance of £8, 000 a year," was the reply. "I am glad to hear you say that," said the king.
