The RED MIST

by Randall Parrish

HERE is a story of love and war told in the way that only Randall Parrish can tell it. A Confederate spy and the daughter of a Federal officer, neighbors in childhood, are the two leading characters. Then there is a murderous gang of bushwhackers. There is action and excitement all the way through. You'll not be troubled with ennui while reading it. By all means read

The high school foot ball team will play Naperville at Naperville tomorrow, Saturday, and they expect a big crowd of local rooters to accompany them and cheer them to victory. The local eleven have a good chance to cop the county championship this year and appreciate the rooters' help.

Rev. J. F. Jenness returned on Wednesday from Englewood, where he has been attending the Rock River Conference. In his absence last Sunday the pulpit of the Methodist church was filled in the morning by Rev. C. A. Nyman of Lombard and in the evening by Rev. A. T. Stephenson of West Pullman. The conference has returned Mr. Jenness to Downers Grove for the third year.

Answer to a Correspondent. No Mr. Boshysell, you must not confound bellona with bologna. The one belongs to the age of myths and the other to the sausage. The bellona is made chiefly of hot dogs of war, whereas the bologna—well, never mind what the bologna is made of. Shut your eyes and eat it, and be content with the thought that, whatever their origin, it is constructed of little pieces of something, while the other is not.

HER BOY IN HIS COAT OF BLUE.

By Minnie Ring Piper.

A mother's heart's rejoicing At the sight of her baby boy, Asleep in the old-fashioned cradle— A treasure of infinite joy; And she pictures him grown to manhood, Launching out on the sea of life, A handsome, fearless fellow, Her hero in time of strife.

But lo! the scene is shifted And the babe of her early dream, Who would guide her tottering foot-steps Along life's uncertain stream, Is answering the call of his country And proudly she bids him adieu And gives up her priceless treasure— As he dons a coat of blue.

Today his steps are wavering, And the baby of long ago Is far from the scenes of his childhood, And the mother who watched him go Is asleep in the country churchyard. And no stone marks her resting place. Though the service she rendered her country From our memory cannot be effaced.

Remote from the field of battle, Away from the cannon's roar, Her soldier boy is marching With his comrades in days of yore— Unfurl the flag of Old Glory, Let it wave o'er the brave and true, While we tip our hats with reverence To her boy in his coat of blue.

Approaching a Reform. "Has Crimmon Gulch adopted prohibition?" "No," replied Broncho Bob. "But it's on the way. So's to bring it around gradual, the judge has made a rule that any man who draws a gun on another will have to quit drinking. You'll be surprised to see how many of the old boys are going to be reformed."
