FIRE ALMOST DESTROYS A SMALL HOUSE

Fire practically destroyed the small cottage home of Thomas Peszynski Gierz Street Monday morning.
It is thought that it originated from the chimney in the kitchen and was blazing merrily before the arrival of the fire department.
All of the furniture was carried out by the neighbors and those who answered the alarm so that nothing but the house was damaged.
It was very noticeable that the water pressure is very low, tho in this case it was sufficient as the house was small. However, a fire in one of the larger local structures would be able to make good headway because of the lack of pressure.
This makes the fourth alarm within a week.
Last Friday morning the fire whistle called the firemen to the H. M. Allen home on Middaugh Avenue. The chimney burned out setting fire to the roof but no damage was done.

Had Excuse for Eating Candy.
Edith's aunt had come for dinner and brought the little girl a box of candy, but warning her not to eat any of it until after the meal, as it would spoil her appetite. Edith turned to her mother and asked what the menu for the meal was, and was informed that lamb stew had been provided. "Oh, than I dess I'll eat tandy and spoil my appetite. I don't care for lamb stew."

"THE GREATEST THING IN LIFE"

At Dicke Theatre Saturday, Feb. 1st. Dicke Story
Edward Livingston, capitalist, club man, bon vivant and man about town, sadly realizes that when he appears on the streets, there is none in New York worthy to associate with him. What distresses him most is the fact that he is violently in love with Jeanette Peret, a cigar girl from whom for a year or more he has been accustomed to buy his cigars.
Finding her engaged one day with a jaunty customer, he becomes jealous and bluntly avows his love for her. Being a man of blunt speech he reminds her injudiciously that she is a simp, fit only to marry a simp and to rear a brood of simpkins. He escapes before the indignant Jeanette can vault over the counter at him. Some days later he hears that Mona Peret is ailing and in need of funds with which to return to his beloved France. Livingston sends him $100 by a messenger with a note that the money was in payment of a good deed done in behalf of the sender. So with Jeanette he returns to France unaware of the identity of his benefactor.
Jeanette makes up her mind that Livingston is not the man she is seeking when she sees him fall into a rage because two children touched his tailored knees with sticky fingers. So she makes up her mind to accept le Bebe on his promise to stop cutting garlic, which indeed is a great concession for him to make. War with Germany is declared and le Bebe marches off to the front with Jeanette's blessing. He is wounded in a skirmish and Jeanette and her father hide him as the Germans enter the village.
Livingston meanwhile has donned a uniform of an officer in the struggle against autocracy. Altho he despises his fellow soldiers, he is a brave man. But when one of his whiskered fellow soldiers saves his life at the risk of his own, he becomes the soldier's friend. Manliness comes to him slowly, and he laughs when one of his comrades offers to trade one big cookie for two little ones.
Before retreating from the village, the French had placed a telephone in the basement of Peret's home. Peret telephones news of the Germans to the French with such success that the Huns start forth to discover and destroy the source of information.
Mons. le Bebe is wounded in an engagement and carried to the Peret house where he is covered with sand and thus escapes capture. Jeanette is telephoning when the Germans force their way in as word comes that the Americans are advancing to the rescue.
Jeanette's message is received by Livingston who in return, sends her another weightier message. Le Bebe though dying, defends Jeanette against the Huns with valor and dies as Livingston and the on coming Americans enter the village. The Germans are driven away and as her grief over the passing of le Bebe dies away, Jeanette opens a store where doughnuts and home-made pies are sold to the troops. Of course, Livingston is her best customer and in the end all ends happily for Jeanette and her soldier sweetheart.

MILK PRODUCERS MET AT ZINDT'S HALL WEDNESDAY

The annual meeting of the Local Milk Producers Association was held in Zindt's Hall Wednesday afternoon. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: John Gansberg, President; Fred Hagelman, Vice-President; Fred Staffeldt, Secretary.
The subject of the Milk Producers Co-operative Marketing Company was introduced and the by-laws of the Association were read and discussed. The object of the Marketing Company is to handle the milk of the Producers Association compelling the dealer in Chicago to buy from the Association at a standard price, instead of the present go-as-you-please method of every farmer making a contract with the dealer in Chicago for practically what he is offered.
Mr. Cooper, of St. Charles, spoke at length on the aims and objects of the Association and Marketing Company.
The meeting was well attended, at least thirty milk producers being present.

FIRE ALARM LAST NIGHT FROM Q. SCHMIDT'S HOME

For the stentch time in the last two weeks the wailing voice of the fire siren was heard about seven o'clock last night.
The call came from the Quira Schmidt home on Grove street and the firemen found it to be another one of these cases where a chimney burning out caused the residents to think that the house was on fire.
The exterme low water pressure at this time would make a fire in a large building a serious thing.
