Protect Your Complexion
from the Wintry Blasts

On a cold, raw day your skin burns and chafes alternately. If not properly taken care of, it roughens up so that you have to be ashamed of it, and often causes you intense pain.

A simple application of the standard complexion remedies and toilet necessities that we carry will eliminate such a possibility.

We have all the well-known brands, but if we haven't the particular one you want, we'll get it for you.

The snow last Saturday had the men in charge of the operating on this division scared. Several trains were annulled early in the afternoon the fear being expressed that they would get out in the blizzard swept prairies and freeze up. Rolling stock and especially engines are too precious these days to risk in a big snow.

Don't Experiment with Injurious Hair Dies—SUNLIGHT HAIR TONIC (25 cents on the market) is the only Hair-Color-and-Food-Tonic combined. Immediately restores Gray, Faded or Ugly Hair to a lovely blonde, Auburn, Brown or Black. Also restores Dry Harsh Hair to a beautifully soft, silken texture. Harmless. Guaranteed. 50c and $1 at your druggist. (60c and $1.10 postpaid.) adv.

We understand some of the railroads running into Chicago are contemplating moving their big rotary snow plows from the mountain divisions to Illinois. There hasn't been a snow in the west this year where they were necessary and they could have been used here very handsily four or five times in the past month alone.

Every Sunday morning for the last month the program has been the same—get out and shovel from a ton to five tons of snow from the walks around the house. Some folks who started the winter right by keeping their front walks clean have evidently become disgusted with the continual shovel, shovel, shovel. The paths are not as clean as they were after the first big snow.

BROMO OINTMENT is admitted the best curative salve known. Very soothing and healing for Eczema, Itch, Sore Eyes, Scalp Diseases, Chapped Hands, Frost-bite, Nettle Rash, Poison Oak, Running Sores, Sore Feet, Scalds or Burns. The Ladies Aid of St. Paul's Evangelical church surprised Mrs. Uebele at the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. W. Mills, Monday afternoon. The occasion was her eightieth birthday. A very social afternoon was enjoyed and delicious refreshments served. A beautiful bouquet of roses was presented Mrs. Uebele to remind her of the event. Those present were Mesdames Phil. Binder, Ed. Heints, J. Staiger, Phil. Mochel, H. Woelfersheim, John Zell, Ben Weatherbee, Tillie Johnson, George Heints, L. Klein, P. Crusus and Augusta Selig.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Heinke Thursday night, January 31, 1918, a son.

The following verses are reprinted from the 'Oo La La' Times, the weekly paper printed by an engineering regiment 'over there.' Bob Carpenter and Alfred Straube, of Downers are members of this regiment.

I am sitting here a thinking
Of the things I left behind,
But would hate to put on paper,
What is running through my mind.

We'll dig a million trenches
And clear ten miles of ground,
And a meaner place this side of hell,
I know is still unfound.

But there's still one consolation,
Gather closely while I tell:
When we die we're bound for heaven
For we've done our bit in hell.

We've built a hundred kitchens
For the cook to stew our beans,
Stood a hundred guard mounts,
And cleaned the camp canteen.

We've cleaned a million mess kits
And peeled a billion spuds,
Marched a hundred thousand miles,
And washed a million duds.

The number of parades we stood
It would be hard to tell,
There'll be no parade in heaven,
For we've done our hitch in hell.

When final taps are sounded
And we lay aside life's care,
And we have done our last parade,
Up that golden stair.

This then we'll hear St. Peter
Tell us loudly with a yell:
Take a front seat Railway Engineers,
You have done your hitch in hell.

MORE ABOUT FOOD LECTURES

It is to be hoped that more Downers Grove women will be able to avail themselves of the free food conservation lectures now being offered at noon every Tuesday, at the School of Domestic Arts and Science in the Tower building on Michigan Boul.

So many questions arise in the average home as to the necessity for all this urging to save wheat, sugar and fats. The average busy mother feels that she is doing her full duty by her country when she knits for the Red Cross, helps the children make scrap books for the soldiers, gives ten cents a week toward the support of a little Belgian orphan and perhaps even manages to buy a liberty bond or helps to buy one with money saved from her household allowance.

All these things are good and necessary but greater than any of them is the imperative necessity of saving food.

Before the war Germany produced four-fifths of the food stuffs she consumed, France, one-half and Belgium, one-fifth. Now Belgium produces nothing, France has been invaded in her most fertile domains and the consumption of foodstuffs in these two countries is at least a half again as great as before the war. Soldiers as a matter of course need more and heartier food than the same number of men engaged in clerical or indoor occupations. Women, too, when working in munitions factories or tilling the soil, as the women of France have done since their men were called to the defense of their country, require the most nourishing food they can get quite different both in quality and amount from the food required by the same women in their former occupations of lace and artificial flower making. As a matter of course production has in no way kept pace with the increased demand.

On the other hand, Germany has not been invaded and in addition she has acquired the wonderful wheatfield of Roumania and has access also to southern Russia from which she can eventually draw all sorts of supplies. Let no woman think that Germany can be defeated by starvation.

The question sometimes is asked 'why not send corn if the United States has such an abundance of it and it is such a wonderful food?' There are many good reasons. Every housewife knows that cornmeal will not stay good for an indefinite length of time, and as for transporting the whole grain, the French have not the mills to grind it nor do they understand the art of cooking with it. Another thing, the soldier at the front and the woman in the munitions factory must have a bread that is good when it is no longer fresh. Even the most ardent lover of corn bread will admit that it is not good when it is say, two days old, yet bread is often that old when it reaches the soldier at the extreme front, the very man who needs the best.

Hence we must send wheat, one of the most compact and energy-producing foods there is. Since not enough has been produced in this country to supply both the allies and ourselves the question of saving to increase our surplus is put squarely up to the American housewife. In her own kitchen she can help to win the war.

In addition to the saving of wheat there is the question of sugar. We do not realize that the American people use more sugar per capita, per year, than any other nation in the world. It is not only the use of sugar to sweeten our foods but the consumption of candy among all classes and all ages is enormous. We could cut this last item in two with benefit both to our health and our pocket books. Sugar is a concentrated energy food, and as such is of recognized value to the fighting man.

Let the housemother study ways of substituting other grains and cereals for wheat, and urge upon her family less buying of candy and soft drinks and she can feel that she is doing her share toward winning the war.

Such was in part the message of Dr. Henry Coe Culberson of the United States Food Commission at the Tower Building on Tuesday. He has recently returned from the front and after listening to his talk every woman present felt as truly called to serve her country as her brother in arms.

Cornmeal in Honduras.
Because of the marked success of recent governmental and private efforts to promote the production of more cereals during the period of the war, writes Consul Walter F. Boyle, Puerto Cortes, an American company has imported and erected the first mill for the milling of cornmeal. This was purchased in the United States and has been erected at San Pedro, Sula, Honduras. It is a small equipment, but marks the beginning of a new industry.

Ben Lounsbury took his daughter Cassie, Georgia Gregory, Ella Bruyer and Mable Oldfield to Downers Grove Sunday afternoon. Ben thought it a wise move to start out in time to be there by the time school started Monday morning.

Archie Schlauder and his father, D. A. Schlauder drove to Cass on business Monday. They had quite a time getting through the new snow.

Harry Faulhaber, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Faulhaber, who was operated on for appendicitis at the West Side hospital in Chicago last week, is improving nicely.

Will Mochl is butchering this week.

Ice making on all the shallow ponds is at a standstill. They are frozen clear to the bottom leaving no water to float out the cut ice.

HOARDING COAL?

Coal Hoags Will Be Brought Up With A Round Turn by the Fuel Administration.

'Many persons having an ample supply of coal to carry them over the emergency, are making false statements, on the official blanks in order to secure coal from the dealers. This practice takes coal away from those actually in pressing need of fuel.'

'The Fuel Administration are preparing to prosecute under the law, which imposes a $5,000.00 fine or two years imprisonment, any person who makes false statements on the official blank in order to secure fuel. The investigators from the department of Justice under Mr. Cavanaugh, are making investigations at the direction of R. W. Childs, Special Assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, with a view to breaking up this practice and the investigators of the Fuel Administration in the various wards of the city are instructed to promptly report all violations of this regulation.'

As this order indicates, the Department of Justice is active throughout the State, and will promptly handle any cases where there is a malicious violation of this law.

J. E. Williams, Fuel Administrator for DuPage Co.
