"JANE GOES A-WOOING"

Jane Neill, seventeen years old, who has spent some years in an industrial school, receives information that her father, who kept the "White House" lunch wagon, has decamped, after he had placed the twins in an orphan home. Jane takes charge of the business and cares for the twins.
Mickey Donovan intimates that she may have a home if she marries him, but she fails to appreciate his consideration. She reads an advertisement calling for a stenographer, "homely, middle-aged and strong as a horse." She goes to the address given, where she finds David Lyman, a patron of literature and darts, who is a nervous wreck and who is trying to complete a morality play before he dies. When Lyman dictates his terms, she thinks of the helpless twins and consents.
Jane goes to the orphan asylum, gets the twins and establishes her in a tenement which she calls home.
Monty learns from Mr. Harmon, his lawyer, that his allowance has been stopped and he seeks in vain to change the irascible old man's mind. Jane is kept up late one night by Lyman, who is dictating to her. His mood changes and he drives her from him. She flees down a corridor and in a large apartment sees a party given by Monty.
He dances with Nita and for the sixth time, asks her to marry him. But, warned by her mother to be on her guard until the contents of Lyman's will are revealed, she puts him off.
When Monty seeks Lyman the next morning, his body is discovered lying on the floor. A letter addressed to Jane is found and she takes it to her home.

But when Jane opens the letter she is amazed to find Lyman's will, which directs that the entire Lyman fortune shall go to her! She returns to the Lyman home and overhears Harmon tell Monty that the Lyman estate now belongs to him by virtue of the terms of a will they are examining. Jane now realizes that the last will would not only deprive Monty of his inheritance but cause him to hate her. So she decides to remain silent and return to the tenement.
Mrs. Arliss prompts Nita to search Monty out in his tenement room and Jane's fighting blood is aroused when she hears that the mother and daughter are leagued together in a plot to steal Monty from her. She tells Harmon the day of dissimulation has passed and he introduces her to Monty and the Arlisses as Lyman's sole heir.
She is finely arrayed and at this moment Mickey comes with the sole purpose of asking her to marry him.
Monty rejoins her and she thrusts the will into the stove. Monty asks her to marry him. She shakes her head in the negative, for she realizes that she doesn't love Monty after all.
Monty, relieved, leaves her and Mickey comes forth from his hiding place trembling, for if Jane refused Monty what would she do for him? But she doesn't—, for his loyalty and devotion have struck a responsive chord in her heart. She tells Monty that sometimes the best things are not what you go after but those that come to you, when you need them most.

"A WOMAN'S STORY OF THE WAR"

Last Thursday evening in the First Evangelical church an instructive and interesting lecture was delivered by Miss Margaret Wintringer. Hers was "A Woman's Story of the War." She had been sent over by the Christian Herald and the Sunday School Times as an investigator and war correspondent to find out and report on the effect of the liquor traffic upon the allies military efficiency. She started her hearers with her first hand proof that the campaign for the Dardanelles, and the fighting in England's part of Belgium and Flanders were defeats for the allies because of the delays of transportation and lack of men directly traceable to drinking.
Also that Russia's breakdown and bloodshed date from the time when large quantities of liquor were given to the Russian army by German agents in and out of Russia. She showed that more than ten times as many babies were laid on and killed by drunken English mothers than were killed by Zeppelins during the season of their raids, and yet the public was not aroused about it.
She said the goal had been set for "A Dry World by 1930!" And that a worldwide movement was now on foot to accomplish the task. She appealed for our interest and intelligent co-operation in all the movement.
We were very glad to have heard Miss Wintringer.

NAVY RECRUITING STATIONS AGAIN DOING BUSINESS

Owing to the great publicity given to the demobilization of the Army and Navy, and the fact that thousands of the sailors and soldiers are being released as rapidly as possible, a large portion of the people in this country are unaware of the fact that the Navy is again open for enlistments and that it is seeking young men who are anxious to enter the service, obtain the instruction for which the Navy is so noted and have the opportunity of seeing the world at Uncle Sam's expense.
It is of course recognized that upon the Navy is going to rest a large responsibility during the next two years, and that it is to the Navy that this country must turn for the purpose of carrying out the policies and ideas that will be established by the Peace Conference. Having borne its part so well in the recent world conflict, the Navy is now called upon to face many and new duties, and inasmuch as a very large portion of the naval force at the present time is composed of reservists, whose enrollment for active duty ceases as soon as peace has been signed, it is necessary that a regular and permanent naval establishment be built up with new men.
Since there can be little doubt that this country will demand and obtain a much larger Navy, the opportunities for the young men now going in will be unlimited. Regardless of what branch of service he may enter, he is assured of a mental, moral and physical training which cannot be surpassed and is rarely equalled. This training, given by the Navy to the young man who is just leaving school, will enable him upon the completion of his enlistment, to go into the world if he so desires fully equipped to meet any line of work which he may select.
The Bureau of Navigation has issued an order granting authority to give all men who enlist in the Navy within four months after being discharged from the Army, Navy or Marine Corps, a thirty day leave with full pay before being transferred to a training station or receiving ship.
This gives such men a very good opportunity to straighten out domestic affairs before leaving, and at the same time they are being paid while doing so.
Enlistments in the Navy are open in practically every branch. Arrangements are now being made whereby the transportation of applicants from towns having no recruiting office to the nearest recruiting office can be secured, and any inquiries addressed to the Navy Recruiting Station, Transportation Building, Chicago, Illinois, will receive prompt attention.

Had Excuse for Eating Candy.
Edith's aunt had come for dinner and brought the little girl a box of candy, but warning her not to eat any of it until after the meal, as it would spoil her appetite. Edith turned to her mother and asked what the man for the meal was, and was informed that lamb stew had been provided.
"Oh, then I guess I'll eat candy and spoil my appetite. I don't care for lamb stew."
