TRACING EVOLUTION OF BAR

In Old Rome It Had Its Origin in Relations Existing Between Patron and Client.

The Roman bar, writes S. P. Scott in Case and Comment, deduced its origin from the intimate association of patron and client in the days of the republic. This relation, founded upon mutual support and assistance, bore a considerable resemblance to that of ford and vassul during the middle ages without, however, including the oppressive restrictions imposed upon the latter by the laws of feudalism. Among the many duties required of the patron was that of transacting the legal business of his clients and appearing for them in court. This service was at first entirely gratuitous, but subsequently, when the fles of hereditary connection became less binding, and consultation with patrons was abandoned by their clients for the advice erudition, a voluntary fee, called an honorarium, was expected. The amount of this was established by custom, and, in the course of time, when excessive gifts of this kind were virtually demanded, all fees were regulated by

After law had developed into a selence the profession became recognized as a distinct calling, and legal procedure having been systematically organized, representation of parties in court was successively effected by three classes of persons-procurators, cognitors and advocates.

Deepest Lake in America.

A lake known as the Great Sunken lake, is reported to be the deepest lake in this country, and perhaps in the whole world. Located in the valley of the Cascade mountains, about 70 miles north of Jacksonville, Ore., this lake, which is about 15 miles long and four miles wide, is so deep that its depth cannot be measured. It is aftuated so far below the crest of the mountains that winds cannot reach ft, and its surface is like a sheet of glass. It is sometimes called the "lake of mys-

WHEN you signal the telephone operator and ask for a number, she repeats it slowly and distinctly. She is trained to follow this practice in order to make sure she has heard you correctly.

It is a good plan to answer "Right" or something similar if the operator's repetition of the number is correct. Then she is sure and can make the proper connection with no loss of time.
