TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO IN THE REPORTER

Mrs. J.D. McVean is making a visit with relatives at Ottawa and Streator.

A number from Downers Grove went to Lemont Saturday night, to witness the glove contest between Tommy White and Eddy Santry at that place. They report a tame exhibition of the art of self defense.

Joe Rando goes to the mud springs down in Indiana for recreation and health next week. Joe is one of the slickest dressed men in town and it will be a novel sight to see him clad in habiliments of mud. We trust he may return with restored health and vigor.

Among the campers who left for the grounds on Fox river, near Oswego, were the following gentlemen: Harry Bateman, Frank Black, Glenn Edwards, Fred Hoffert, Lester Lyman and Ed. Graves. Others will probably join the party in a few days.

Allen Barnhart and the Misses Walker, entertained a cousin from Douglas Park last Sunday.

According to latest reports, his honor the ghost remains with us and keeps up his lonely vigils on the North side. Some night when Capt. Rogers returns home late from lodge he will attack his ghostship with his foghorn voice and then will this illustrious spirit of some departed mortal will be blown into thinner air than even now evidences his appearance here.

R. D. Parker and wife left for an extended visit in the East.

Miss Susie Edwards will again be one of the teachers in our school, the coming year.

Many venturesome and curious persons are staying up nights to catch a glimpse of the alleged spook that haunts the vicinity of the railroad tracks on the north side.

Daniel J. Miley, has until recently, been considered one of the bravest young men of the village. Since the advent of the "ghost", however, this belief has been shaken. Late last Thursday evening he was returning to his lodgings from a call on one of the boys (?) at Hinsdale, and perceived a person standing on the sidewalk, whom he supposed to be Chas. Mattox. Dan in his characteristic way greeted the supposed acquaintance with a "Hello, Charley" and reached out his hand to accompany his salutation with a friendly tap on the shoulder. Imagine his consternation and surprise to find the person or thing melt into the atmosphere and disappear from his startled vision, needless to say Dan did not call "it" back. He just took two steps in crossing the street and speeding up the steps of Sine's restaurant, vainly endeavoring to unlock the door. After scratching all the paint off the door with his night key, he finally gave up in despair and after a hurried glance over his shoulder, he split the air with an unearthly yell that brought Mr. Sine down stairs and Dan with a sigh of relief lost no time in divesting himself of his clothing and seeking safety in his bed. Dan now makes it a religious duty to retire with the ringing of the curfew.
