ORIGIN OF COUNTRY FAIR

Its Establishment Can Be Clearly Traced to an Ancient Religious Custom.

The country fair owes its origin to an ancient religious custom. In early days, when Englishmen observed saints days, a crowd of worshippers and pilgrims would assemble within the precincts of the church or abbey during the festival of a popular saint. To supply the wants of the throng, tents were pitched and stalls for provisions set up in the church-yard. Peddlers and traders found many customers among the worshippers, and in course of time these pious assemblies became markets of trade, and were known as "fairs."

Many odd customs associated with fairs illustrate the social life of other days. The opening of fairs in many towns was announced by hoisting a large glove in a conspicuous place. In the event of a law forbidding the holding of a fair without royal permission the king would send his glove to the town as a token of his consent.

In Liverpool, a hand was exhibited in front of the town hall ten days before and after each fair day, to signify that no person coming to or going from the fair might be arrested for debt within the town's precincts.

At Palgrave fair, Exeter, an immense plumb pudding was drawn through the town by four yoke of oxen and afterward distributed for the crowd. Its ingredients were: 400 pounds of flour, 170 pounds of beef suet, 140 pounds of raisins and 240 eggs. It was boiled in a brewer's copper for three days and nights.

FOOD ADMINISTRATION EXHIBITS

CONSERVATION ACTIVITY SHOWN

Illinois Food Conservation Organizations Are Well Represented at the State Fair Now in Progress at Springfield.

The Food Conservation bureau and demonstration station, with headquarters at 28 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, and the conservation division and library publicity section of the United States Food Administration, Illinois division, all have exhibits at the State Fair showing the work being done by their departments.

A miniature conservation bureau, with dolls garbed in the official United States Food Administration uniform worn by women conservation workers, has been arranged by Mrs. Charles A. Munro, organizer and head of the Conservation Bureau, to show what is being done at her bureau in Chicago.

The tiny bureau lacks nothing contained in the large one, and is complete from office to kitchen. It shows everything from the model kitchen to the literature booth, where the latest Food Administration rulings and conservation receipts are given away. The dainty blue and white tea room is duplicated to the smallest detail, and the food exhibits and model war gardens are all shown.

The latest government conservation literature is given out by a group of women workers under the direction of Mrs. Alfred J. Benson, chairman of the Conservation Division of the Illinois Food Administration. Photographs and exhibits showing the work being accomplished by the various departments of the Food Administration have also been arranged and are in charge of Miss Jessie M. Woodford, Director of Exhibits for the Illinois Division of the Food Administration.

How to can without sugar is one of the things being featured by the Food Administration at the fair this year, and large quantities of literature on the subject are being distributed.

"Read to know, know to act, and act to win" is the slogan being featured. Under the first, "Read to know" is shown the work of the public libraries in supplying educational literature along conservation lines. Under the second part of the slogan "Know to act," is shown the activities of the Conservation Bureau where practical demonstrations in conservation culinary are given for the enlightenment of puzzled housewives, and lastly, "Act to win" is the work of the conservation division of the Food Administration in informing the public of their patriotic duties in food conservation lines.

A conservation flag 20 feet long has been loaned by Tracy C. Drake of the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, and is flying over the entire United States food conservation exhibits and booths.

RESTRICTIONS ON BEEF RAISED

Extreme Drought Causes Rush of Light Weight Cattle to Market, Causing Surplus.

A careful analysis of the beef situation here and abroad has resulted in the lifting of the present restrictions on beef consumption immediately, rather than in September, as originally contemplated.

The extreme drought in the Southwest and other parts of the country is endangering the meat herds and producers are rushing light weight beef to the market, thus creating an unexpected surplus in light cuts. For this reason the United States Food Administration has announced the present program of serving beef in public eating places at one meal each day may be discontinued.

Householders need no longer limit their purchases to 1 1/2 pounds of beef and bone or 1 1/4 pounds of clear beef for each member of the family each week.

It is highly desirable, however, according to food officials, that the American public consume medium and lighter grades of cattle, thus conserving the heavier animals for our own armed force and those of the allies. As all heavy beef is for the present needed for war export, retail markets are requested to handle cattle which dress not over 475 pounds and public eating places and the public in general are urged to create a demand for light weight cuts.

Enlist NOW in the conservation army and join in the great food offensive.

Crimean War. The Crimean war occurred in 1853-55, between Russia on one side and the allied forces of Turkey, France and Great Britain on the other. It grew out of dominating and aggressive claims by Russia. The war took its name from that it was mainly waged in a Russian peninsula on the border of the Black sea, a strip of country called Krim or Crim by the Russians and Anglicized as Crimea, pronounced Crim-e-a, with the I short as in criminal and accent on the second syllable.
