Would Take the Job.

Into the office of the Wall Street Journal there ventured a small boy, awed by the great adventure of getting his first job. Timidly he approached an editor and explained what he wanted.

"Hi," quoth the veteran to the would-be recruit, "it's too bad, but there are no vacancies now, unless you would like to be managing editor. How about that?"

"The youngster began to back away. "Oh," he gasped, "I wouldn't like that at all."

Yesterday he came back, with desperation in his eye, and mumbled up to the veteran.

"I've changed my mind," he announced. "When do I start in?"

Ought to Save Money.

A Lowell man works at the Lawrence street plant of the United States Cartridge company and his wife works on Market street. He works nights and she works days. When he gets home in the morning she's gone and when she comes home at night he's gone. But they see each other on Saturday long enough to go to the bank together and tick a nice little roll away after the bills are paid.—Boston Globe.

Introduced Himself.

Grandma was out walking with her small grandson when a large dog came running along the walk. The little boy started to pet the dog when grandma warned him not to, saying that he was strange to the dog and might get hurt. At that the little fellow walked over to the dog, made a bow, and said: "I'm Ford Bradley. Now you know me, don't you?"

Sometimes Judge Too Hastily.

It might be advisable for us to sound our own depths and backgrounds and foreground for the people we ruthlessly condemn as hopelessly impossible, and so put so much greater an impediment in the way of their advancement to better things. Criticism is a cruel and too often an entirely unnecessary weapon to wield against those with whom we come in contact. There are very few people who are really "impossible." If only we would make the effort to find their good and worthwhile virtues.—Exchange.

Babies Burdened With Names.

It begins to look as if the same person who used to christen the Pullman sleepers has taken up his residence in this city and is now naming war babies. A glance at the vital statistics records shows that some of the girl babies are going through life burdened with Christian names that will compel the growing generation to give considerable time and study to pronounce them. All of which recalls the words of General Sherman.—New York Sun.

Want to Build a Pyramid?

If the great pyramid of Cheops in Egypt were to be built today its total cost would be not less than $150,000,000, according to experts who have studied the vast structure. Cheops is 490 feet high and covers almost thirteen acres. Upward of 90,000,000 cubic feet of stone were used in building this great pyramid.

Hell-Dog.

Cerberus in ancient Greek story was the sleepless dog which guarded the entrance to Hades; the lower or infernal regions in which dwelt the shades of the dead. He is usually represented with three heads, and with serpents round his neck.

TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO IN THE REPORTER

The sky did look angry and threatening, and the distant roll of thunder foretold the approach of a storm. Notwithstanding this warning, the First Baptist church choir of Downers Grove accompanied by a goodly number of friends, set sail for its annual trip to St. Joseph, Michigan, Friday evening, August 21st. In spite of the threats of the elements, however, everything seemed to be in our favor. The moon was "out of sight," the company most congenial, and so far as we have been able to learn since our return, the "squalls" were confined mostly to land, and arose from the hearts of anxious parents and friends who entertained grave fears for our safety. This anxiety was all for naught, for while those near and dear to us at home were endeavoring to insure their lives against the almost continuous flashes of lightning that several times visited earth in their midst, old Lake Michigan was tranquilly itself, and not one of our party found it necessary to "heave to"—this a strictly nautical term—during our voyage.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Simonson went to Cedar Lake, Indiana, Saturday, for a few days fishing. They took $25.00 worth of fishing tackle along, and caught—well fish stories are hard to believe, who ever told them, therefore we refrain from repeating "true" stories.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy L. Bush returned Monday from a pleasant week's outing spent at Oregon, Illinois.

Lee E. Stanley has accepted a position as stenographer in the retail store of Marshall Field.

Lieut. Backus and wife and Mr. Ritthouse and wife of Chicago, took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rogers Sunday.

Mrs. M. J. Kenyon has an apple tree in her yard in blossom and also having fully matured apples thereon, which is quite a curiosity. A second crop of blackberries from the same vines that bore before this year, is also ripening in that ladies garden.

The new courthouse at Weldon begins to assume shape and shows where our four weeks work has been done. The boiler house walls are all up ready for the roof which is now being put on. The tower four feet wide and six and a half feet high which extends from the boiler house to the jail and from the jail to the courthouse is finished except for the floor. The foundation for the outside walls of the courthouse are all up ready for the water table. The concrete is in ready for the bases of the large piers nine to twelve feet square that carry the iron columns which extend from the basement floor to the roof of the tower.

MAETERLINK MASTERPIECE "THE BLUE BIRD"

In the masterpiece, Maeterlinck has turned the light upon Life, drawn aside the veil of the future, and has given a vivid reminder of the past. He has shown that the pursuit of happiness leads to all quarters of the globe, when, as a matter of fact, true happiness is at our doors, unrecognized.

The day before Christmas two very human little children, a little boy named Tyltyl and his sister Mytyl, the children of daddy Tyl and Mummy Tyl, peasants, were envious of the prosperity of the rich children who lived nearby. Madam Berlingot, their neighbor, had a little daughter who was ill, and she asked Tyltyl and Mytyl to let her little girl have their pet dove, which she craved, but the children sensibly declined.

After they are put to bed the Fairy Berylune appears and by means of a magic diamond shows them the souls of all things, which come to life in the shape of symbolical figures. Even the cat and the dog are given the power of speech. The fairy then takes the children in search of the Blue Bird, and they visit the Palace of Night, where they meet Sleep and Death, and the various sicknesses, the terrible Wars, the Stars, the Dew, etc.

These scenes are obliterated by the Fog of Forgetfulness, and in the Palace of Luxuries a sumptuous banquet is in progress, the Luxuries gorging themselves with the plentiful food. Seated around the table are the Luxuries of Being Rich, Landowner, Sacrificed Vanity, Drinking When Not Thirsty, Eating When Not Hungry, Knowing Nothing, Sleeping More Than Necessary, and Fat Laughter, all of symbolical types.

The children are taken home by the Fairy, their hunt for the Blue Bird having been fruitless. Many birds have been pursued and caught, but they die immediately and change colors, so that the real Blue Bird has not been captured. In the morning the children awaken with different conceptions of life. They greet their parents with affectionate embraces, and everything seems cheerier and brighter to them. Thoughts of the little girl begging for the dove in her semi-delinium induce them to give her the bird, and lo! it turns to a Blue Bird. They have found the Blue Bird of Happiness in making others happy.

It Always Was.

We are so strong for the young mothers that even if one shows us a red little bunch of freckles weighing four pounds, we will take a solemn oath before a notary public that it is the prettiest and cutest youngster we ever saw and fight anybody who dares it.—Exchange.

To Mend Broken China.
Tie the broken parts of china together with stout string, being sure that the edges meet evenly; then completely submerge the dish in a pan of skim milk and place on back of stove to gently simmer all day. Do not remove from the milk until thoroughly cold and even then don't cut the string for 24 hours. Hot water will not cause the cups to come apart again.

War's Glory.
War, like all other situations of danger and of change, calls forth the exertion of admirable intellectual qualities and great virtues, and it is only by dwelling on these and keeping out of sight the sufferings and sorrows, and all the crimes and evils that follow in its train, that it has its glory in the eyes of men.—Bryant.

Cops Stand the Strain.
A well-known scientist informs us that closing the eyes and relaxing the muscles for a space of five minutes several times a day helps one to stand the strain of war-time conditions. And here we have been blaming the cops when they were doing a wise and excellent thing, especially when they were wanted by belated citizens, who were holding a hurried session with stick-up men.—New York Times.
