On Hallowe'en a gang of young fellows forgot themselves and the respect due church buildings and damaged the stone stairway entrance to the First Evangelical Church... It will be necessary to get a mason at considerable expense and trouble to repair the damage done... It is hoped that this public mention and disapproval of their act will prevent them from similar thoughtlessness... Hallowe'en jokes and fun are all right so long as no damage is done.

We know you are glad the "Flu" order has been recalled so you can see the wonderful Paramount Art-craft program again but—listen—we have not been inactive even though the theatre has been closed. Nothing is too good for our many patrons. We secured the best pictures, but were not satisfied so we have now secured the latest 1919 model picture machines to project these great pictures.

These will be on exhibition at our theatre Saturday, Nov. 9th. If you want to see a wonderful piece of mechanism don't miss this chance.

Saturday, Nov. 9th.

HOLD YOUR BOND! Meeting Liberty Bond pledges often falls to the housewife, as general manager of the family income and outgo. The breadwinner may be well-paid and industrious but it falls on the woman as the monitor of the home to handle the income in the way of prudence. Upon her rests the "making of the budget" which insures the most effective possible use of the pay envelope. And, very often in her centers the keen sense of responsibility for Liberty Bond payments... Miss Grace Dixon, Federal Director for Women, has issued the following appeal to encourage all domestic business managers in this vital patriotic duty: "Thousands of women throughout the Seventh Federal Reserve District bought bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan. They bought in a spirit of patriotic service and sacrifice. They played a large part in the glorious over-subscription of the Fourth Liberty Loan. Let no consideration, unless it be 'dire necessity', affect the completeness and the glory of that sacrifice. Under no consideration trade in your Liberty Bond for merchandise. You know you lent the money your bond represents for those who are willing to sacrifice their lives, in turn, for humanity. Also, do not neglect to complete payments on bonds for which you have subscribed. The country is counting on the dollars you have pledged. Do not fail your country at the time of test."

in their tracks rather than yield. At Chateau Thierry last July the same principle governed the American Marines and infantry. "Hold!" That is the word for Liberty bond subscribers. F. O. Wetmore, President of the First National Bank of Chicago sums up the case in this way: "The people responded most loyally and liberally in their subscriptions to the Fourth Liberty Loan. Unless the purchasers now hold and pay for their bonds their action in buying has been of little benefit. Every purchaser, therefore, to make his loyalty and liberality one hundred per cent must save and pay for his bonds, when he or she will have in addition that grand and glorious feeling of being the owner outright of the most choice investment in the world." A subscriber who keeps his payment pledge wins a real Marne victory over temptation to "quit." A subscriber who fails, needlessly, suffers a terrible moral defeat. Wars That Made History. The Civil war in America was followed—in 1866—by the Prusso-Austrian campaign in Bohemia, which may be said to have lasted only seven weeks, since Austria was completely brought to terms by her first crushing defeat at Koniggratz. The logical sequel to the Prussian war of 1866 with Austria was the German one of 1870 with France, though, indeed, it may be said to have been practically decided in less than one month—at Sedan—the rest of the time being but a long-drawn-out agony of fighting despair on the part of the vanquished. Misconstrued Silence. "He who says nothing is never misquoted," remarks a philosopher. No, but sometimes his wife accuses him of sitting there thinking things.—Boston Transcript.
