CORP. WM. B. MILES FINDS REPORTER

France, October 8th, 1918. Mr. C. H. Staats, Dear Sir:

Was rather surprised this evening while getting ready to send the mail up to our platoons in the line to find a Downers Grove Reporter addressed to Arthur Dent, Pigeonier Section, Co. C, 108th Field Signal Battalion, but upon looking up the record of this man find that he was attached to this organization when we first landed, but was soon transferred elsewhere. As it was practically impossible at this time to get his correct address, I have taken the liberty to read it, and it being the first home paper I have seen for many months, I enjoyed it immensely. Would it be asking too much of you to request that you send me an edition occasionally? I would surely appreciate it.

All quite tonight, a radical change from the general situation in this vicinity last night. The Hun (Jerry is the collective name which we apply to that bunch) gets careless with his shells and bombs very often, and doesn't seem to care where they land or who they hit. Wish you could see what Jerry did to one of our motor trucks the other evening. You can still tell that it was a truck, and it is wonderful how much iron and wood a piece of shrapnel can go through.

Had the pleasure of seeing Warren Wells the other day, and as usual the old boy was having a good time. Found him up in a little railway trench shooting his rifle at planking, duck boards, and anything else within reach, in fact he was so glad to see me that I thought I might be the next target. It sure is fine to meet a fellow from your home town, so we had a little talk over old times, etc. and as he was going up with a transport that night I had to leave sooner than I would have done. Also met Potter and Tom and John Kidwell a few weeks ago. Although we are all in the same division, you know the one I mean—the one that has given Jerry so much H— in the last few months, we are so scattered out that we don't see each other very often, but when we do meet—OH! BOY!!

Will have to bring my letter to a close now, as it is 10 o'clock p. m. and I have to go on guard from 12 midnight until 6 a. m. I never used to keep such late hours, but things have changed. So wishing you "the Best of Luck" (as Tommie says) and thanking you in advance for the requested favor, I am,

Sincerely,

Cor. Wm. B. Miles.

FRANKLIN G. HULING

November 1st, 1918.

My dear Mr. Staats: Thank you for the copy of the Reporter received today, issue of Oct. 25th. I did not see the issues of the 11th and the 18th, and if you have an extra copy of each of these latter dates, would be glad to see them. This is fine camp in many ways. Pretty pine woods around it, and beautiful American Lake only two miles distant. Overlookink all is Mt. Rainier, covered now with a royal ermine mantle of snow and encircled with a halo of clouds.

Indoor meetings are not permitted on account of the popular "flu", and the rain prohibits most outdoor meetings. The main work now is visiting the boys in the hospital and attending to matters for them which they are unable to look after. They are very appreciative of this service.

With kind regards, I am, sincerely, Franklin G. Huling.

THANKS FROM A FRENCH REFUGEE

The following is a letter received by Mrs. A. Doelsaere from a French refugee family. Last winter Mrs. Doelsaere donated five pairs of woolen socks she knitted to the Belgium relief society. One pair was received by a French girl and she received this letter of thanks last week.

Bray Su Seine, 5th October 1918.

Dear Madame: The pair of woolen stockings given to a little French girl by the American Committee of the Seine and Marne your card was found with a request to write to you. No doubt you would like to know who received these stockings and so I will tell you. They were given to a little girl five years old whose father has been wounded in the war, and whose mother was killed by the Germans on May 28th of this year.

This is how it happened: During the German offensive of the 27th of May the family of this little girl, consisting of the father, mother and three children, lived in Buynes, a small village about two miles northeast of Oulety le Chateau department of the Aisne, on the night of the 27th of May the Germans in an air raid threw bombs on the house, reducing it to dust. Under the mass of debris were found bodies of the mother, killed outright, and an infant daughter of 13 months, who died a few minutes later. The father, a little son and this little girl survived. This meant complete ruin for the family, as nothing could be saved from the catastrophe. Some clothing given by neighbors provided for their temporary need. Since then they are refugees in Broy on the Seine, where the American Departmental Committee of the Seine and Marne has kindly donated them some household effects.

You can address all inquiries concerning this family to the Committee if you are sufficiently interested in the misfortune of these children. It was the little girl herself who found the enclosed card.

The survivors of this family are the father, Moucel Roch, 35 years old, the son, seven years old and the daughter, five years old. You will find theirs as well as the Committee below. Please except my kindest regards, together with my thanks. Marcel Roche, 17 Rue des Toupins, A Bray Sur Seine, Seine et Marne, France. Comite American, Departmental assistance auge refugees, Rue Fouquet A'Somois Sur Seine, Seine et Marne, France.

"HEART OF THE WILDS"

Story Based Upon Edgar Selwyn's Play "Pierre of the Plains" For Elsie Ferguson

At Dicke Theatre Sat. Nov. 9th.

Jen Galbraith, the beautiful daughter of a tavern keeper on the Canadian-American border, is loved by residents for miles around. Her father sells liquor to the Indians and is suspected by the Mounted Police, to which is attached Tom Gellatly. Pierre, who hates Tom and loves Jen ferrely, is Val's chum. Pierre is determined to win Jen for himself, and to put a stop to Tom's courtship. Pierre knows of Grey Cloud's affiliation with the police, and when he learns that the Indian has purchased liquor from Galbraith, he tells the latter of his peril. Galbraith induces Val, to go in pursuit of the Indian and to recover the liquor at every hazard. Accompanied by Pierre, Val rides away and when they catch up with Grey Cloud, they beg him to return the liquor to them. Grey Cloud replies that if Val will bring about Jen's marriage to him he will destroy the evidence he has against his father. Enraged at this demand, Val kills Grey Cloud and he and Pierre leave the scene. The murder has been observed by an Indian scout who informs the Mounted Police.

The news brought by Pierre is withheld from Jen and when Tom reaches the tavern he freely announces his intention of going to Archangel's post. While Tom is feeding his horse and Jen is preparing dinner, Galbraith utters laudanum in Tom's coffee and later when he drinks he succumbs to the drug and falls asleep. Jen takes his dispatches and rides to the Post with them. Returning to the tavern at nightfall, she finds Tom still unconscious. She learns that Val is a fugitive and then comes to the realization of the part she has played in setting the law in motion to insure her brother's arrest. Tom revives and insists upon going to the Post and when she pleads with him, he fancies she is shielding the man she loves. He prepares to leave and Jen threatens to shoot him. He defies her and in her agitation she accidentally discharges the gun. Tom falls unconscious.

Meanwhile, Pierre returns to the tavern and discovers Tom. In a room above he finds Jen searching for bandages. His passion for her prompts him to embrace her and she is struggling with him when Val appears. He is about to kill Pierre when a squad of Mounted Police reach the cabin. They revive Tom, who informs them that he accidentally shot himself. Val gets the drop on Pierre and forces him to give himself up as the murderer of Grey Cloud. As the Police ride away with their prisoner, Jen goes to Tom's aid and they realize how much they love each other.

Optimistic Thought. It is a sure indication of good sense to be diffident of it. Young Lady Across the Way. The young lady across the way says her father has cut down on the size of his cigars and is now smoking pants-leggers.
