Varying Length of Life in Fishes.

The length of life of fishes is variable in the extreme. When we think of the great number of enemies to which any fish is exposed, such as other predatory fishes, parasite worms and crustacea and other parasites (which are usually harmless to man but destructive to the fish) crabs, sea birds, bacterial diseases, etc., we easily see that to live in the water and escape all these dangers requires many protections which at best can preserve only a very small number of fishes beyond the spawning time. Such protections to fishes are speed of swimming, defensive spines and fins, the ability to distend themselves like the puffer to prevent being swallowed, teeth, electric rays, heavy corselets of scutes which easily slip from the skin and a high state of resistance against disease. Thus, if a fish is well protected, out of a large number of its kind a few may live to reach unusually large sizes. There are records of very large fishes of most known varieties.

Sugar Cane and Sugar Beets.

A ton of sugar cane has produced from 119 to 151 pounds of refined sugar in Louisiana in recent years; the sugar product of a ton of beets has been 210 to 285 pounds.

George Harry Bryan, son of Walter Scott Bryan, spent Christmas with his father. He returned to his home at Waverly, Iowa, Tuesday evening accompanied by his cousin, Miss Emily Morton, who goes for a three month visit with relatives there.

C. B. Foster has been relieving J. A. Norpel, the night operator at the Downers Grove tower, the past week, while the latter has been enjoying a vacation.

Nash Bros., the ever popular grocers, remembered the Reporter Office with an excellent box of cigars on Christmas Day. (John, the "Corner Grocery" and "White & Williams" to "C. H. Staats" but printers still smoke cigars.)

"America." The author of the words of "America" was Rev. Dr. Samuel Francis Smith, who was born in Boston in 1808. In 1831, William C. Woodbridge, a friend of the author's, on his return from abroad, brought him a book of music. It contained the air which is now used for our national hymn.

Smith wrote the poem, "America," in Andover, Mass., in February, 1832. The first time it was sung publicly was at a children's celebration of American Independence in the Park Street church, Boston, July 4, the same year.

At Dicke Theatre New Year's Eve. Their mother dead, Jane and Katherine are being taken to the founding's poor farm. Here Jane makes things interesting for the matron. At the asylum she meets a little picanniny whose life becomes strenuous indeed, under Jane's direction. Poverty and distress do not affect Jane's patriotism, and when an army officer's sister lectures to the foundlings on patriotism, Jane is right in her glory—until she practices with a puttyblower on the lecturer. She saves herself from discipline by bombarding the overseer with vegetables.

Colonel Harding, commander of the army post, near the poor farm, has two daughters. The elder ran away while he was stationed in the Philippines. The younger daughter, Cecile, has two suitors: Captain Robert Dutton, a well-to-do officer and a favorite with all but the Colonel's spinster sister, Emily. She favors his rival, Rupert Duncan (formerly Lt. Rupert Duncan of Austria), now holding a commission in the American army but still faithful to his former country.

Dutton proposes to Cecile and is accepted. Miss Emily addresses the children at the poor farm but Jane's rabid patriotism spoils the speech. Miss Emily leaves in disgust. Jane escapes from solitary confinement—her punishment—and follows some soldiers to the post.

She is fast winning the Colonel's affection when Miss Emily enters, recognizes and despite her brother's objections, insist on returning her to the asylum. Arriving there, she finds a letter in Katherine's possession leading her to believe Jane and Katherine are Duttons children. She brings them back to Harding and reveals her discovery. The officer tells Dutton he must either acknowledge the foundlings or face court martial. Dutton is engaged on an important secret experiment for the government. Rather than losing the chance of completing it he takes the children without admitting to clear himself. His engagement to Cecile is broken. Jane and Katherine soon win the hearts of Dutton and all the troopers. Their pranks keep the post in an uproar but afford the youngsters opportunity to detect a spy who finally comes to grief at Jane's hands.

Meantime, Austria instructs Duncan to obtain a copy of Dutton's report on his work. At a Halloween party given by Dutton in honor of his little charges, Duncan steals the document, but meets Jane as he is fleeing. He is about to throw her over the balustrade when Sam, an old sergeant, shoots him. Mortally wounded, he confesses to the Colonel the children are not Dutton's but his. Dutton and Cecile are reconciled and it is learned that Jane's and Katherine's mother was the Colonel's runaway daughter and that they are his grandchildren.

Charm of Old San Antonio.

The charm of the old city lies chiefly around the historic spots and buildings in which the romance of its early history is centered. Rarely do we enter a city that can boast of ancient edifices and hallowed ground, the history of which is known the country over. Rarer still is the community whose quaint buildings, picturesque scenes and romantic atmosphere are its main attractions, luring thousands to its gates each year. Such, however, is the boast of San Antonio, Tex., one of the quaintest and most interesting cities in the United States. Nowhere else may you find a greater appeal to the romantic and the picturesque and having such hospitable welcome extended you; nowhere will you find such a blending of the ancient with the modern as in this delightful city of our own Southwest.—Architecture.

Marriage Question.

Why is it that it never occurs to a certain type of woman that there may be some men in the world too good for her to marry? Every man with any brains at all knows that there are some women in the world too good for him to marry. The average business man shies off from the brilliant and beautiful woman, lest marrying her, he should be patently outclassed through his life. He wants a woman who is just his equal in looks and intelligence —no more—at least not so much more that he will have to suffer in contrast. But women apparently never give such considerations a moment's thought. I have seen brilliant men loaded through life with women who caught them very young, and who stopped growing at nineteen, while the men kept right on. These women must have known in the days when their fiancés were gazing to them poetically which they couldn't understand that they were not the equals of their men.—Woman's Home Companion.

Use for Prejudice.

Prejudice must serve some purpose since we all have it. Doubtless we valued distinct. When the argument of antecedent probability is advanced for all time there will be partisans, no nations, no religions, no creeds.

It is a Little Strange.

"This is a funny world," said the facetious fellow. "Nothin's ever done when a railroad man switches cars, a musical cuss beats time, and a newspaper guy kin pound a typewriter for it strikes for help and a bank clerk ain't worth shucks unless he strikes a balance every evenin', but just let a feller tap a (hill) real gentile like an' without disturbin' anybody an' there's the darndest row that ever was."—St. Louis Star.

Dust.

Dust, by its own nature, can rise only so far above the road; and birds which fly higher never have it upon their wings.—Henry Ward Beecher.

NEWSY NOTES FROM LISLE AND BELMONT

A. PORTER, Correspondent Telephone 152-R-2

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m.

Lets finish the year 1918 in the right way - by attending Sunday School.

Morning Worship 11:00 a. m. It is expected that our new pastor, Rev. A. H. Anderson and his wife, of Chicago, will be with us. Don't fail to be there and give them a hand of welcome.

Evening Services promptly at 7:45

Gilbert Schultz, who has been ill with pneumonia, is convalescing.

Ross Rogers has come home from Wisconsin University to spend the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Griffen entertained Rev. and Mrs. A. H. Anderson of the Union Seminary Chicago, Sunday.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Blankenberg have been ill during the past week.

Mrs. Jessie Richter and family of Downers Grove and Mr. and Mrs. A. Porter and Rosella were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Plumb and family Christmas Day.

The Misses Lydia and Esther Weighing of Antigo, Wisconsin, students of N. W. C., spent the week-end at "Grand View Farm."

"I am a member of the Red Cross." That is the unspoken, unwritten message you convey to your correspondents when you place a Red Cross seal on the back of your letters this month.

No one except Red Cross members will obtain Red Cross seals this year, under an arrangement between the National Tuberculosis Association and the Red Cross. In former years tuberculosis societies have sold seals in order to get funds with which to finance their work. This year, as a war measure, the Red Cross has set aside $2,500,000 for the use of tuberculosis organizations throughout the country.

By using seals on your December mail, holiday gifts and New Year's remembrances this year you not only display your sympathetic interest in the saving of human lives from tuberculosis but you also let it be known that you are a member of the Red Cross.

More than 16,000,000 Red Cross seals were sold in Illinois last year. The funds from this sale have helped to make possible the building of 33 new county tuberculosis hospitals, the beginning of tuberculosis nursing service in scores of communities and in other ways to bring health and happiness to thousands of Illinois men, women and children.

To all who purchased Red Cross seals in the past, the Illinois Tuberculosis Association urgently recommends the purchase of a membership in the American Red Cross.

When you buy a Red Cross membership you will be awarded ten seals. When you get the seals use them. Let every person who gets a letter, a Christmas remembrance or a New Year's greeting from you, know that you are a member of the Red Cross and that you are interested in the fight against tuberculosis, a disease which kills more of our men, women and children than all other communicable diseases combined.

All these sugars have a very high food value. That is the second fact to keep in mind. They are energy foods and of particular value in that they act very rapidly in producing energy for the body to use.

When you say sugar, you mean that white crystalline material which comes originally from the sugar cane or the sugar beet. And that substance is a pure sugar. But it is not the only sugar, by any means. If you were a chemist you would call that sugar "sucrose," and you would remark quite casually that, of course, there are other sugars. Some of these other sugars are "glucose," or "dextrose," or "grape sugar," "fructose," or "levulose," or "fruit sugar," "lactose," or "milk sugar," and "maltose," or "malt sugar."

Honey, corn sugar, maple sugar and maple syrup, corn syrup and many other syrups contain one or more of these "other sugars." In this sense, all the sugar substitutes are not really substitutes at all, but are sugars just as cane sugar is sugar. All fruits contain sugar in one kind or another. Dried fruits—prunes, figs, apricots, dates—contain a great deal of sugar. They can be used by themselves as sources of fuel for home fighters.
